AUTHOR'S PREFACE.

Historians write history gathered from actual facts; novelists and poets write imaginative stories based upon some actual fact or some presumed occurrence mingled with flowery language, created for pleasure to the reader. But here is a book which is placed before a somewhat limited number of liberty-loving people, which is intended neither for pleasure nor flowery language. The highest aim of this work is to place before the people of Hancock county a few facts and figures showing the gradual increase of all branches of industry, coupled with the increase of population, wealth, and (last but not least) taxes. Another object of this work is to give a brief and accurate geographical history of the county, which ought to be of interest to every person within the limits of our county. Too much is taught in our public schools regarding Europe, Asia, Africa, and all foreign countries, when at the same time these same teachers, as well as those in whose minds these facts are being instilled, do not know the geography or principal historical facts regarding our little local political division at home.

The contents of this volume is not in any of its parts original with the author, or more properly, the compiler, except as to arrangement, which fact alone is not above reproach. Every source available was searched to its very depths, and after these means were exhausted, the knowing brain and willing hand of friends were brought into action, and the fruits of their efforts embodied in this work. The sectional map near the close of the first chapter is the artistic work of John W. S. Riegle, ex-county surveyor, and present city civil engineer, and to him I am greatly indebted for his kindness and liberality in furnishing this one lesson in local history, for such it is, if the reader will carefully study the same.

Whoever expects to find this volume entirely free from defects, has but little acquaintance with the difficulties ever attendant upon procuring such material. Although we have taken the best available means to insure accuracy, yet from a variety of causes, unnecessary here to specify, some errors may have occurred. If anything materially wrong is discovered, it is unintentional on the part of the writer, and is probably due to lack of time in ascertaining the facts, and also due to the hurried manner in which the writer was, through necessity, compelled to complete his work. To all who have aided me, some of whom have spent much time and research, we feel under lasting obligations, and are enabled by their assistance to present to the researching public of our somewhat limited domain a far better work than could otherwise have been produced.

JOHN HANCOCK.

JOHN HANCOCK.

John Hancock, in whose honor Hancock county was named, was one of the leading spirits of 1776 who sent forth the immortal Declaration of Independence, an instrument whose clarion notes rang throughout every nation, causing the spark of freedom to burn with renewed hope in the hearts of oppressed humanity. Bearing the relation to this distinguished patriot that the people of Hancock county do, and associated as his memory is with their homes, it is not inappropriate here to give a short biographical sketch of one who contributed so much to the establishment of our free government and whose heroic statue so proudly surmounts our magnificent court house.

John Hancock was born at Braintree, Massachusetts, January 23, 1737. He graduated at Harvard college in 1754, and then entered his uncle's counting house in Boston. When in his twenty-seventh year his uncle died, and he inherited his business and much of his property. The position of an enterprising and successful merchant, in those days, was one of considerable importance, and gave him a prominent place in society. He was "easy and engaging in his manners, liberal in the employment of his wealth, turning his influence to good account, apt and ready to serve the public." In the commencement of the difficulties with England he was among the foremost of the band of patriots who announced their determination to consecrate both their wealth and lives to the cause of liberty, and in the discussion of the best method of expelling the British troops from Boston, he exclaimed: "Burn Boston and make John Hancock a beggar, if the public good requires it." In 1774 he was elected to the first provincial congress, at Concord, and was chosen its president. Ill health prevented his being sent to the continental congress at Philadelphia that year, but the following season he was added to the Massachusetts delegation. At this time Governor Gage, the British commandant at Boston, issued a proclamation, offering pardon to all rebels, save and except John Hancock and Samuel Adams, the offenses of whom, in the language of the proclamation, were "of too flagitious a nature to admit of any other consideration than that of condign punishment." This denunciation, which was regarded as a mark of distinction by the patriots, gave Hancock a capital introduction to the continental congress, which body, on the resignation of Peyton Randolph, chose him as its president, and in this capacity he affixed his bold signature to the Declaration of Independence. In 1779, Hancock, impelled by ill health, resigned his seat in congress and the same year served as a member of the Massachusetts convention at Cambridge, for the formation of a state constitution. Upon the adoption of the instrument, he was chosen governor, and was annually thereafter elected to that office, with the exception of the term of George Bowdoin, in 1786, during the remainder of his life. He retained his popularity to the last, and died in office as governor of Massachusetts, October 8, 1793, in his fifty-seventh year. Such was the man for whom Hancock county has the proud honor of having been named.

COLONEL JAMES FINDLAY.

COLONEL JAMES FINDLAY.

Colonel James Findlay was born in Franklin county, Pennsylvania, in 1770. His parents were Samuel and Jane (Smith) Findlay, who reared a family of six sons: John, William, James, Jonathan, Thomas and Nathan, all of whom became prominent and distinguished men. In politics they were Democrats, and held office of distinction under that party, but in after years James became a Whig. He married Miss Jane Irwin, and about 1795 moved to Ohio, traveling on horseback by way of Virginia and Kentucky, and settling in Cincinnati, then a small village. Here for a number of years he filled the position of receiver of public moneys in the land office. In 1805-6 he served as mayor of Cincinnati, and again 1810-11. When the war of 1812 broke out he was commissioned as colonel of a regiment, which was the advance guard of General William Hull's army on its march from the Scioto river to the Maumee. On this march he began the erection of Fort Findlay, named in his honor, and from which the city of Findlay derives its name. For meritorious conduct in the war of 1812, Colonel Findlay was afterward promoted to the rank of brigadier-general of the state militia, in which capacity he served for a considerable period. Colonel Findlay was the member of congress from Hamilton county from 1825 to 1833. In 1834 he was the Whig and Anti-Masonic candidate for governor of Ohio, but was defeated by Robert Lucas, and died the following year. Naturally reserved in his manner, he presented to strangers an air of austerity; but to those who knew him he was the soul of kindness and geniality. Colonel Findlay possessed great decision of character, was just in all his dealings, and maintained through life an unsullied reputation.

CHAPTER I.

ORGANIZATION AND FORMATION OF COUNTY.

Hancock county, named in honor of John Hancock of colonial fame, has a history which dates back as far as the settlement of Jamestown, Virginia, May 13, 1607. Through the enterprising efforts of Captain Bartholomew Gosnold, the scheme of establishing a colony in Virginia took form, although previous efforts had failed, and James I became interested to the extent that on April 10, 1606, he completed the royal charter, which afterwards remained as a solid foothold on the soil of the Northwest Territory until ceded to the United States. In 1609 the boundaries of the land granted by the original charter were extended and enlarged, and was made to embrace the territory two hundred miles north and two hundred miles south of Old Point Comfort, the mouth of James river, and to reach "up into the land from sea to sea." This was the original charter under which Virginia held at the time of the formation of the federal constitution in 1788. But that portion of the territory which lies northwest of the Ohio was ceded by Virginia four years prior, thus reducing the radius of her domain. On March 1, 1784, Thomas Jefferson and others, who were appointed as delegates by Virginia, made the cession of all her rights, title and interest in the northwest territory to the United States, and on the same day the deed of cession was accepted by congress. Thus it can readily be seen that the western claims of Virginia were the most sweeping and were founded upon the oldest historical documents, and that the territory now embraced within the limits of Hancock county was a part of old Virginia and also part of the original thirteen colonies, as shown in the following map.

When the Northwest Territory was ceded to the United States by Virginia, in 1784, it embraced only the territory lying between the Ohio and Mississippi rivers, and north to the northern limits of the United States. It coincided with the area now embraced in the states of Ohio, Indiana, Michigan, Illinois, Wisconsin, and that portion of Minnesota lying on the east side of the Mississippi river. The United States itself at that period extended no farther west than the Mississippi river, but by the purchase of Louisiana in 1803, the western boundary of the United States was extended to the Rocky mountains and the Northern Pacific ocean. This territory was, as early as 1673, claimed by France, and was included in that vast region generally known as Louisiana. That portion afterward known as "The Northwest Territory" was held and claimed by France until the conquest of the French possessions by Great Britain, when it was finally ceded to Great Britain, by the treaty of Paris, in 1763. This territory was held and governed by Great Britain in the form of colonies, but subject to the treacherous dictations of King George, until 1776, when the colonies renounced their allegiance to the British crown, and sustained their renunciation with powder and ball, compelling old Mother England to sue for peace, which was granted by the treaty of peace signed at Paris, September 3, 1783.

By means of this treaty, the claims of Great Britain, France and Spain to the territory northwest of the Ohio were virtually withdrawn. Nevertheless there was a question of ownership among the states. Virginia, New York, Massachusetts and Connecticut claimed it in whole or in part. Already the articles of confederation had been drawn and it was these conflicting claims that caused the delay in ratifying the articles of confederation. Congress, unwilling to decide between them, urged all the claimants to yield their claims. New York led the way in the matter of cessions. On the first day of March, 1781, her delegates made an absolute surrender of her claims. On the same day the delegates of Maryland signed the articles of confederation, thus making the Union formally complete. The other cessions followed, though not as rapidly as was hoped.

In March, 1784, Virginia ceded all her claims, reserving the region between the Scioto and Little Miami rivers. The next year came the cession of Massachusetts; and in September, 1786, Connecticut also ceded her claims, excepting the region called "The Western Reserve," which was not ceded until May 30, 1800.

But these were not the only claims which had to be satisfied prior to the commencement of settlement within the limits of Ohio. Numerous tribes of Indians, by priority of possession, asserted their respective claims which also had to be extinguished. This was done by the treaty of Fort Stanwix, October 27, 1784, and Fort McIntosh, January 21, 1785.

Now that the Northwest Territory belonged to the United States, an ordinance for the government of the territory was drawn and adopted by the congress of the United States, July 13, 1787. By authority from the provisions of the above mentioned ordinance, Governor St. Clair began to make divisions of "The North West Territory" into counties, among which was Wayne County, established by proclamation issued August 13, 1796. It began at the mouth of Cuyahoga river, and extended south along the western boundary of Washington to Fort Lawrence; then west to the eastern boundary of Hamilton; thence west-north to site of Fort Wayne; thence west-north to southern part of Lake Michigan; thence along its shores to northwest part thereof, including the lands upon the streams falling into the lake; thence due north to the territorial boundary of Lake Superior, and with said boundary through Lakes Huron, St. Clair and Erie, to the place of beginning.

This vast region, then known as Wayne county, included the northwestern portion of what is now the state of Ohio; the eastern portion of Indiana, and the whole of Michigan; and it remained as such until the admission of Ohio into the Union as a state in 1803; then that portion of the so-called Wayne county included in the limits of Ohio was divided into various counties under the state government.

MAP ILLUSTRATING THE LAND DIVISIONS OF OHIO.

The northwest portion of Ohio remained unorganized until February 12, 1820. Prior to this time it had remained part of the old unorganized counties and under the jurisdiction of the same. On the 12th day of February, 1820, the general assembly of Ohio passed an "Act for the erection of certain counties named therein." In that act we find the following reference to Hancock county: * * * * fifth to include townships one and two south, and one and two north in the ninth, tenth, eleventh and twelfth ranges, and to be known by the name of Hancock county." Section 2 of the same act provided, "That the counties of Hancock, Henry, Putnam, Paulding and Williams shall be attached to the county of Wood."

March 4, 1822, the following order was made by the commissioners of Wood county: "Ordered by the board that the township of Waynesfield, within the jurisdiction of the county of Wood, be co-extensive with the boundaries of Wood and Hancock, and to include the same."

May 28, 1823, the commissioners of Wood county ordered that "So much of the township of Waynesfield as is included in the unorganized county of Hancock be set off and organized, and the same is hereby organized into a township by the name of Findlay, and that the election for township officers be held on the first day of July, A. D. 1823, at the house of Wilson Vance, in the said township."

The first record of the township is that of the election of April 5, 1824, at which time there were 18 votes cast, and that Job Chamberlin, Wilson Vance and Jacob Poe were elected trustees: Matthew Reighly, clerk; Wilson Vance, assessor; Philip McKinnis, constable; John Hunter and John Gardner, fence viewers; Robert McKinnis and William Moreland, overseers of the poor; and Job Chamberlin, Sr., treasurer. Not much necessity for county treasurer in those days, nor much salary for collecting taxes, when the total amount of tax duplicate for 1826 was $56.12.

But during these years of dependency on Wood county and the inconvenience of transacting business so far from home, the difficult way of traveling and the dangers that the settlers were at any moment likely to encounter, settlements were being formed in all parts of the township; the dense forests were being broken here and there by clearings; neighbors were getting closer, and in fact the population of the county had increased so rapidly that the people felt that they had become strong enough to maintain an independent organization; and not only had the people become awakened to this fact, but the general assembly of the state of Ohio. On the 21st day of January, 1828, the general assembly of Ohio passed an act entitled "An act to organize the county of Hancock," of which the following are some of its provisions:

"Sec. 1. That the county of Hancock as heretofore laid off, and the same shall be and is hereby organized into a separate and distinct county, and suits and prosecutions which shall be pending, and all crimes which shall have been committed within said county of Hancock previous to its organization, shall be prosecuted to final judgment and execution within the county of Wood, in the same manner they would have been had the county of Hancock not been organized; and the sheriff, coroner and constables of Wood county shall execute within the county of Hancock such process as shall be necessary to carry into effect such suits, prosecutions and judgments; and the treasurer of Wood county shall collect all such taxes as shall have been levied and imposed within the county of Hancock previous to the taking effect of this act.

"Sec. 2. That all justices of the peace and constables within the said county of Hancock shall continue to execute the duties of their respective offices in the same manner as if the county of Hancock had remained attached to the county of Wood.

"Sec. 3. That on the first Monday of April next the legal voters within the county of Hancock shall assemble within their respective townships at the place of holding elections, and shall elect their several county officers, who shall hold their offices until the next annual election.

"This act shall take effect from and after the first day of March next."

In accordance with the provisions of this act, the voters of Hancock county met in Findlay and proceeded to hold an election. There were 74 votes cast, and the following officers were elected:

Don Alonzo Hamlin, sheriff.

Thomas Slight, coroner.

Matthew Reighly, auditor.

Joshua Hedges, treasurer.

William Hackney, assessor.

Godfrey Wolford, John Long, John P. Hamilton, commissioners.

There is no record of where the first offices were located, but tradition has it that the county treasurer carried his tax duplicate in his hat, and the other officers probably carried their records in the same way, as they were not very numerous or bulky.

Before we commence the narrative of formation of townships, it might be convenient to some of our readers to know what is meant by townships, ranges and sections. In order to make correct surveys and locate lands prior to the settlement of the state or of the formation of counties or townships, or the subdivisions of townships into sections, the general government found it necessary to have a certain and fixed point from which townships and ranges might be counted. The Ohio survey to which we belong, was made in 1819 and 1820, after the fixing by the government of the first principal meridian (as it was called), which meridian commences at the mouth of the Great Miami river, and running thence north on the line between the states of Ohio and Indiana to the Michigan line. A line was also established running east and west on the 41st parallel of latitude, and called the base line. This base line runs directly through the center of Hancock county, three miles south of Sandusky street, dividing it into two parts, north and south. Townships are numbered north and south from the base line; those bordering on the line are called townships number one, north and south—number two coming next, and so on. The ranges, which include an original township in width, or six miles, are numbered from the principal meridian, east, beginning with number one, at the Indiana line, and numbering east. Hancock county is in ranges nine, ten, eleven and twelve.

A search of the records does not reveal the date or definite boundaries of the sub-division of Hancock county prior to 1829; however, the various entries on the commissioners' journal establish the fact that the county was divided into three townships, soon after the independent organization, viz.: Findlay, Amanda and Welfare; and by diligent search of the commissioners' records it is fair to presume that the following map shows the sub-divisions of our county as it appeared in 1828:

June 1, 1829, agreeable to the petition of sundry citizens of Welfare township, the name of Welfare was changed to Delaware.

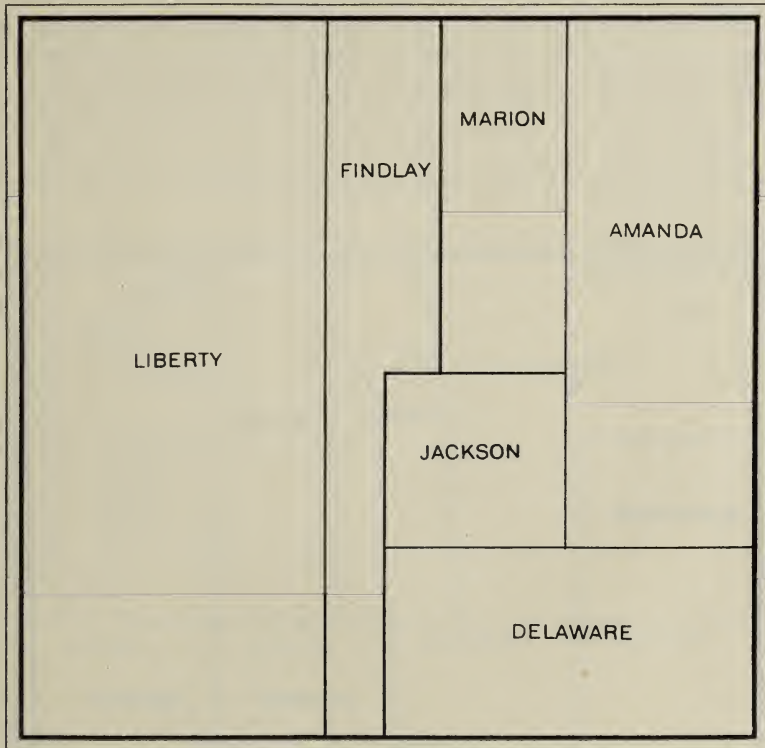

December 7, 1829, the original surveyed townships number one (1) south in range eleven (11) east, was set off into a body politic and corporate and called Jackson, in honor of Andrew Jackson, thus causing the map of our county to appear as shown in the following cut:

December 6, 1830, the county commissioners deemed it necessary that the township of Findlay should be divided in the following manner: Beginning at the southwest corner of section thirty-one (31), in township one (1) north, in range twelve (12); thence north to the northwest corner of section six (6), in township two (2), in range twelve (12); thence west to the northwest corner of section four (4) in range eleven (11); thence south to the southwest corner of section thirty-three (33) in township one (1) north, in range eleven (11); thence east to the place of beginning; which bounds shall be a separate township and shall be known and designated by the name of Marion. And in the next place, commencing at the southeast corner of section thirty-two (32), township one (1) north, range eleven (11) east; thence north to the northeast corner of section five (5), in township two (2) north, in range eleven (11); thence west to the northwest corner of section two (2), in range ten (10); then south to the southwest corner of section thirty-five (35), in township two (2) south; thence east to the southeast corner of section thirty-six (36), in range ten (10), thence north to the southeast corner of section thirty-six (36), in township one (1) north; thence east to the place of beginning; which shall be a body corporate and politic, and retain the name of "Findlay."

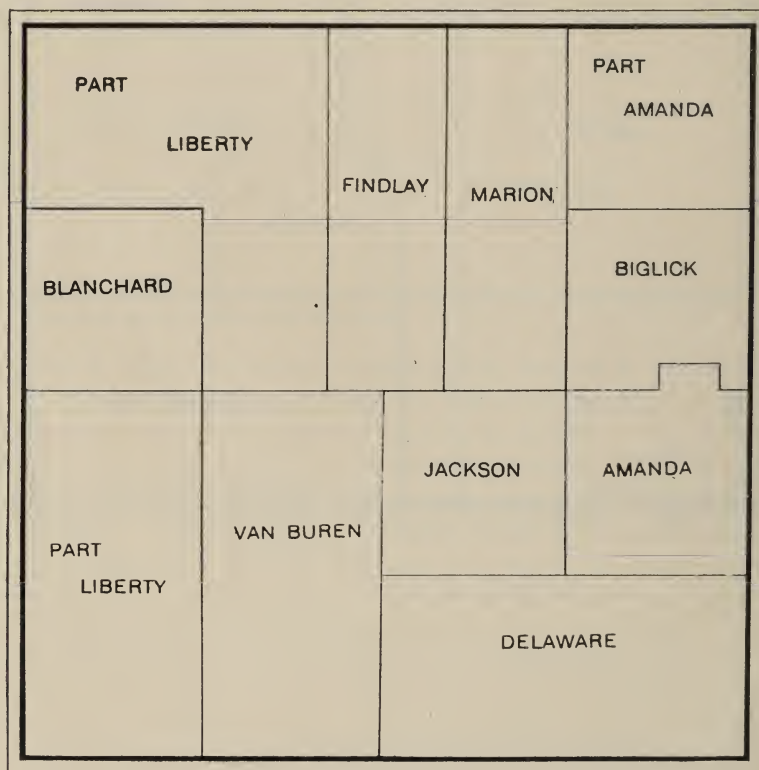

And in the next place, commencing at the southeast corner of section thirty-four (34), in township two (2) south, in range ten (10); thence north to the northeast corner of section three (3), township two (2) north; thence west to the northwest corner of section six (6), in range nine (9); thence south to the southwest corner of section thirty-one (31), in township two (2) south; thence east to the place of beginning; in which bounds shall be made a separate township and be known and designated by the name of "Liberty," thus causing the map of our county to appear as shown in the following cut:

March 7, 1831, agreeable to a petition of sundry inhabitants of Hancock county, the original surveyed townships numbers one (1) and two (2) south, in range ten (10) east, was set off to be known and designated as Van Buren township.

And on the same date the county commissioners ordered that hereafter the township of Amanda shall consist of the original township one (1) south, in range twelve (12) east, and sections 34 and 35 in the original surveyed township one (1) north, range twelve (12) east; also, that the original surveyed township one (1) north, in range twelve (12) east, except sections 34 and 35, shall hereafter be known and organized by the name of Biglick; also the original surveyed township one (1) north, in range nine (9) east, shall be known and organized by the name of Blanchard, which caused the map of our county to appear thus:

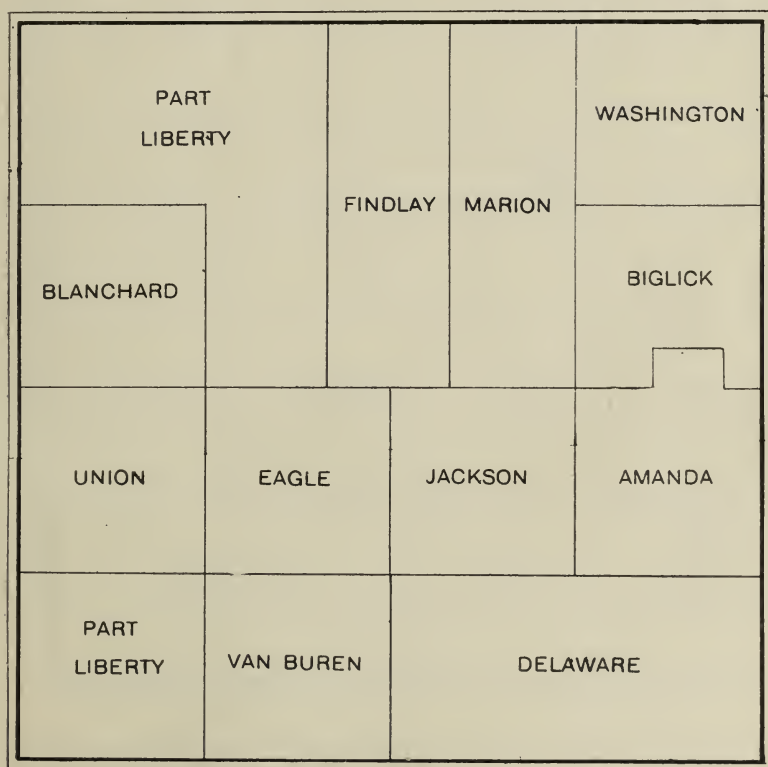

March 5, 1832, the county commissioners set off the original surveyed township number two (2) north, in range twelve (12) east, into a body corporate and politic, and named the same Washington township.

June 4, 1832, the county commissioners set off the original surveyed township number one (1) south, in range nine (9) east, into a body corporate and politic, and named the same Union township.

December 3, 1832, the county commissioners set off the original surveyed township number one (1) south, in range ten (10) east, into a body corporate and politic, and named the same Eagle township.

Which above divisions caused the map of our county to appear as shown in the following cut :

March 4, 1833, the county commissioners set off the original surveyed township number two (2) north, range eleven (11) east, into a body corporate and politic and to be known by the name of Cass. It was also ordered on the same date that the original surveyed township number two (2) north, range ten (10) east, be set off into a separate township and named Portage.

June 3rd, 1833, the county commissioners ordered that Biglick township shall include all of the original surveyed township number one (1) north, range twelve (12) east, which changes caused the map of our county to appear as shown in the following cut:

PART LIBERTY	PORTAGE	CASS	WASHINGTON
BLANCHARD	PART LIBERTY	FINDLAY	MARION	BIGLICK
UNION	EAGLE	JACKSON	AMANDA
PART LIBERTY	VAN BUREN	DELAWARE

March 2nd, 1835, the county commissioners ordered that the original surveyed township number two (2) north in range nine (9) east be set off into a separate and distinct township and called Pleasant.

Also that the original surveyed township number two (2) south, range twelve (12) east, be set off into a separate and distinct township and called Richland, which changes caused the map of our county to appear as shown in the following cut:

PLEASANT	PORTAGE	CASS	WASHINGTON
BLANCHARD	PART LIBERTY	FINDLAY	MARION
UNION	EAGLE	JACKSON	AMANDA
PART LIBERTY	VAN BUREN	DELAWARE	RICHLAND

December 5th, 1836, the county commissioners ordered that the original surveyed township number two (2) south, range nine (9) east, be set off into a separate and distinct township and called Orange, which caused the map of our county to appear as follows :

PLEASANT	PORTAGE	CASS	WASHINGTON
BLANCHARD	LIBERTY	FINDLAY	MARION	BIGLICK
UNION	EAGLE	JACKSON	AMANDA
ORANGE .	VAN BÜREN	DELAWARE	RICHLAND

June 5, 1838, the county commissioners ordered, on the petition of Andrew Thompson and others, that sections 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35 and 36, Biglick township, and sections 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 11, 12, 13 and 14, Amanda township, be and the same is hereby set off into a separate township, politic and corporate, and named Ridge, causing the map of our county to appear thus:

PLEASANT	PORTAGE	CASS	WASHINGTON
BLANCHARD	LIBERTY	FINDLAY	MARION
			BIGLICK
			RIDGE
ORANGE	VAN BUREN	DELAWARE	RICHLAND

June 1, 1840, the county commissioners ordered that sections 5, 6, 7, 8, 17, 18, 19, 20, 29, 30, 31 and 32, in township number two (2) south, range eleven (11) east, and sections numbered 1, 2, 11, 12, 13, 14, 23, 24, 25, 26, 35 and 36, in township number two (2) south, range ten (10) east, be set off and created as a new township called "Madison," which causes the map of our county at this time to appear as shown in the following cut:

PLEASANT	PORTAGE	CASS	WASHINGTON
BLANCHARD	LIBERTY	FINDLAY	MARION
			BIGLICK
			RIDGE
ORANGE	VAN BUREN	MADISON	DELAWARE
			RICHLAND

February 3, 1845, the legislature of Ohio passed an act organizing the county of Wyandot, and sections 1, 2, 11, 12, 13, 14, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 34, 35 and 36, in township one (1) south, range twelve (12) east, and sections 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 32, 33, 34, 35 and 36, in township two (2) south, range twelve (12) east, were taken from Hancock county and formed a portion of Wyandot county, causing the map of our county to appear as follows:

PLEASANT	PORTAGE	CASS	WASHINGTON
BLANCHARD	LIBERTY	FINDLAY	MARION
UNION	EAGLE	JACKSON	RIDGE
ORANGE	VAN BUREN	MADISON	AMANDA
		DELAWARE	WYANDOTTE CO.
			RICHLAND

March 5, 1845, the county commissioners ordered that sections 6, 7, 18, 19, 30 and 31, in township two (2) south, range twelve (12) east, be attached to Delaware township; also that sections 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35 and 36, in township one (1) north, range twelve (12) east, be attached to Biglick township; also that sections 3, 4, 5 and 6, in township one (1) south, range twelve (12) east, and sections 1, 12, 13, 24, 25 and 36, in township one (1) south, range eleven (11) east, be attached to Amanda township.

CHAPTER II.

THE MOUND BUILDERS.

It is now generally believed that a very numerous race of people occupied a large portion of this continent, long anterior to the coming of the North American Indians, but there is no authentic history regarding them further than can be gleaned from the numerous and at the same time massive works stretching from the Great Lakes to the Gulf of Mexico. These works all bear the same general characteristics, and are either mounds, effigies, or defensive enclosures, some of which are of a very marked and extraordinary character.

This long forgotten race, called Mound Builders, in lieu of a more accurate designation, evidently possessed a distinctive civilization, and from the peculiar hieroglyphics sometimes found upon their stone implements, it has been thought probable they may have had a written language. But beyond their almost imperishable monuments, the archaeologist seeks in vain for a further solution of the grand problem of the coming, subsequent life and disappearance of this prehistoric race. On opening a mound he finds only mouldering skeletons, scattered remnants of earthenware, rude weapons of warfare, axes of stone, flint drills, spearheads, badges, and many other specimens of stone ornaments, cut and polished from material rarely indigenous to the place where found, showing their owners to have been a migratory people or a conquering nation.

Whence came these people; who and what were they, and whither did they go? Some writers have discovered evidences, convincing, apparently, to themselves, that this prehistoric race came from the other side of the globe, and that their advent was made at different times and from different points of a general hive in the supposed cradle of humanity—central Asia. Regardless, however, of the origin, progress and destiny of this curious people, the fact of their having been here is certain; therefore the best that can be done by the archaeologist is to examine their works and draw from them the conclusion that seems the most probable.

All of the tumuli in this part of the state were each about five feet high and thirty feet in diameter, and on being opened exhibited the same evidences of construction as previously mentioned. Three of these mounds were located northeast of Cannonsburg, in Union township: two on section 11, and one on section 13, Orange township: one on section 21, Liberty township, and one on section 11, Delaware township. This list has been heretofore published in papers and histories, but in addition to this list, there is a very distinct mound still in existence on section 18, Allen township; and taking the Archaeological Society as authority (vol. 5, p. 272), there are two mounds in Blanchard township and one in Pleasant.

Those in Orange and Union townships were opened by William M. McKinley and Fayette Ballard, who found human remains in each mound, also flint arrow heads and other implements of stone, some of which are still in possession of the McKinleys. No doubt many more small mounds once existed in other townships of Hancock county, which the plow has long since obliterated. Numerous evidences of this strange people cannot be looked for here, but that they once inhabited the valley of the Blanchard is beyond all reasonable doubt.

There is no reason to believe that the fate of the Indians has in any way compared with the fate of the Mound Builders. Judging from the warfare waged by the Indians with the white race, it is to be presumed that if there was any hesitancy of the Mound Builders for the purpose of protecting and holding his own, he was most forcibly assisted in passing. If the cruelties practiced centuries later were not the barbarities of a degenerate race, the Mound Builders probably knew what it was to stick out the tongue, have it clutched with a piece of flannel and cut off, and to be further tortured with all the cruelties which a revengeful and barbarous nature was capable of inventing. It was probable, too, the fate of an inoffensive people and just as probable, too, the deserts of a people which went down before a superior nation. It is not beyond belief that the site of the pleasant, peaceful farms of Hancock county may have been a battle ground for the conflict of the two races, although the mounds here have not the characteristics of those erected for defense.

In the swales which abounded they found the highlands, and in turn gave them up to their conquerors. It is all speculation, but an interesting situation to develop.

THE INDIANS IN HANCOCK COUNTY.

The earliest date of any authenticity of the Indians in this section is 1650, when the Eries held full sway of the northern portion of what is now Ohio. They lived along the southern border of the lake which bears their name, but when they were invaded by the Iroquois five years later, most of them fell before the overpowering foe, while the remainder became incorporated with other tribes, and drifted farther southward.

In the early part of the seventeenth century the Shawnees were living along the Ohio valley, but they were dispersed by the Iroquois, and dispossessed of their happy hunting grounds.

For years before and after the year 1700 this entire wilderness was inhabited by the remnants of defeated tribes, who were permitted to remain through the leniency of their conquerors. In 1750, however, we find something like permanent occupation in northwestern and various other portions of what is now Ohio; the Wyandots, Delawares, Shawnees, Miamis, Munsees, Ottawas and Mingoes.

The Wyandots then inhabited the valley of the Sandusky river and its tributaries, and dwelt around Sandusky bay, and also streams flowing into the lake. The Delawares and Munsees occupied the Muskingum valley. The Shawnees lived along the Scioto, from the Ohio to the Scioto marsh, and also had a few scattering towns along the Miami and Mad rivers. The Miamis occupied the territory drained by the headwaters of the Maumee, Wabash and Great Miami rivers, from the Loramie portage across to Fort Wayne and down the Maumee valley. The Ottawas were scattered along the lower Blanchard, Auglaize and Maumee rivers, and around the western end of Lake Erie, while the Mingoes were settled in the eastern and northeastern portions of the state.

By various treaties made with the Indians from 1795 on down the period of time we pass by until we reach the one in which Hancock county becomes directly interested. On the 29th of September, 1817, a treaty was made at the foot of the Maumee Rapids, with the Wyandots, Ottawas, Shawnees, Delawares, Senecas, Pottawotomies and Chippewas, and all lands in this state then remaining in possession of the Indians were ceded to the United States. Certain reservations were set aside by this treaty for the uses of the several Indian tribes, to which large additions were made by a treaty concluded at St. Mary's Ohio, with the Wyandots, Senecas, Shawnees and Ottawas, September 17, 1818.

The Wyandot reservations embraced a tract of twelve miles square around Upper Sandusky, Ohio; one mile square on Broken Sword creek; 55,680 acres lying on the north and east of the Upper Sandusky Reserve, and 16,000 acres surrounding the big spring at the end of the marsh (in what is now the southwest corner of Seneca county and the line into Biglick township, Hancock county), (see last map of Hancock county), the last mentioned tract being "for the use of the Wyandots residing at Solomon's Town and on the Blanchards Fork."

In 1831 the reservations located in Logan, Auglaize, Seneca, Hancock and Sandusky counties were purchased from the Indians. In March, 1842, the Wyandots ceded their lands to the government. The territory embraced in Hancock county lay between the Indian towns in what is now Wyandot and Seneca counties, and those located on the Blanchard, Auglaize and Maumee rivers. It was a portion of the hunting grounds of the Wyandots and Ottawas, who within the period of American history roamed at will through its unbroken forests. The Wyandots had a small village on the site of Findlay, and cultivated corn along the river within the present limits of the city. Howe, in his "Historical Collections," speaking of the settlement of Wilson Vance at Fort Findlay, in 1821, says: "There were then some ten or fifteen Wyandot families in the place, who had made improvements. They were a temperate, fine-looking people, and friendly to the first settlers." However, some histories and authorities have since refuted this statement, I will not on my own responsibility but from the testimony of numerous citizens who, as late as 1840, have at various times seen Indians in this county. It is true that as a tribe they were all practically gone in 1818, but for years after, scattering remnants were still located in Hancock county.

I further and with more forcible endeavor confirm this statement by the following extract from the "Ohio Hunter," who was none other than Samuel Edwards, an old settler, pioneer and hunter of this county:

"By the help of some friends in loaning me money, I hired a yoke of cattle and one horse, and commenced hauling flour and meal from Urbana, to supply the people with bread, and prevent their starving. Most of the way the road at that time consisted simply of a track cut through the woods, and most of the time this was so wet and muddy as to be hardly traversable. Not unfrequently would my team become stalled in the mud, and the entire load have to be removed, item by item and carried for some distance on my shoulder, and the team with the empty wagon helped out of some mire hole. At such times, I was often obliged to wade to my waist in mud and water. There were very few houses along the entire road. I would sometimes travel a whole day without seeing the habitation of human beings. There was no friendly inn along that dreary road, where the weary traveler might find rest, and comfortable stalls inviting his jaded team to pleasant repose: but instead of this, the pioneer of the Maumee valley reposed upon the bosom of the earth, and turned loose his way-worn team to feed on herbage and flowers, while he himself dressed some unfortunate deer that had been so unwise as to cross his pathway, and made his supper on corn bread and broiled venison, and then lay down by his watch fire and slept in quietude.

"In this manner, I performed seven trips during the summer, and saved many an unhappy family from starvation.

"When making my third trip, I was attacked by a band of Indians. A severe contest ensued. In going up the Blanchard river, through what was then called the twelve-mile woods, there was a deer lick where I always watered my team. While there, I saw four Indians come out of the thicket. One of them, leading a horse, approached the spot where I was standing. I soon discovered that they were in a state of intoxication, and my fears were accordingly increased, for to meet so many Indians alone in the woods, and particularly at that time, when the white man's encroachments were looked upon by no means favorably, was not very desirable; and liquor does not affect the Indian much more favorably than the white man. They wanted to know how I would trade horses. The reader, will, perhaps, remember there was a law against trading with the Indians, and I accordingly told them I did not wish to trade. This did not satisfy them, and they still insisted that I should make them an offer. But having watered my team, I mounted the wagon to proceed on my journey. This they would not permit; but detained me by catching the bridle rein of my horse, and still bantering for a trade. I at last told them I would trade for ten dollars. This so enraged the Indians that one of them drew a club and struck me upon the nose, making it bleed badly. Before this, I had been very much frightened, but now all fear forsook me and I replied to his civility with a blow from my fist just over his eye, which laid him senseless at my feet. Another came furiously toward me and attempted to catch my legs. I caught him by the neck, and giving him an underhand lick, soon silenced him. There is a rule among the Indians, when a number of them wish to take a spree, that one of the number must keep sober. I noticed that there was one of them that did not appear intoxicated, and I looked to him for protection. But an Indian will always resent an injury done to a comrade. So when they saw the other two lying senseless before them, they were so enraged, one grabbed a club and the other drew a butcher knife from under his 'wamus.' When I saw the knife, I gave him the length of a club that happened to be near, against the side of the head, and brought him to the ground. The knife flew out of his hand, and I ran for it, but the other Indian reached it first, and upon gaining the valuable weapon, he ran again into the thicket. On finding myself alone, I sprung for the team and started. I heard one of them say he would go for his gun and shoot me. They started for their wigwams, which were about twenty rods distant. When they reached the wigwams, I heard them quarreling among themselves. Their squaws would not let them have their guns, because they were drunk. So I went on as fast as possible, hoping soon to be out of their reach."

The story goes on to say that he met two white men with their teams and he related his experience, when they all decided to return and kill all the Indians. They armed themselves with clubs and approached near the wigwams, but the Indians saw them and hid in the thicket. So the travelers returned and continued on their journey. This was in the summer of 1838, and the incident occurred in the vicinity of Mt. Blanchard, this county.

The tales of early settlers establish the fact that there were two Indian villages in this county, and that both were located on the banks of the Blanchard. Mrs. Elizabeth Eberly, of Portage, Wood county, related the following relative to the early settlement of her father, Benjamin Cox, at Findlay:

"When my father settled at Fort Findlay, in 1815, there were eight or ten families of friendly Wyandots living around and in the blockhouses of the fort. They tilled two fields, one above and the other below Fort Findlay, on the south bank of the Blanchard. Kuqua was the chief, and one of his sons, Tree-top-in-the-Water, died in a cabin west of the fort before the Indians removed to the Big Spring reservation. New Bearskin, another of Kuqua's sons, lived in one of the blockhouses, the old chief also occupied one of the same buildings. Six or seven miles down the river, the Wyandots had another village, which my father sometimes visited."

This place last referred to was "Indian Green." Indian Green was a clearing about twelve acres square, which had apparently been under cultivation, since an orchard of plum trees was found near the part of the clearing occupied by the graveyard. It has been claimed that earthworks ran along the brow of the hill overlooking the river, but recent investigation does not fully bear out this statement. A man by the name of Ellison settled on the clearing and was found to have robbed the dead braves of their jewels, which were to have given them the means of purchasing a clear title to their share of plunder in the happy hunting grounds. The Indians, who kept a close watch on the dead, soon discovered his meddling and made it expedient for the man to leave the county immediately. The land is located in the southwestern portion of section 7, Liberty township, and situated on the north bank of the Blanchard river, and is now owned by Scioto, Isabella and John McKinnis and R. B. Worden.

From all indications, and stories of early settlers, there was an Indian village at this place, and from various relics which have been discovered at this place, there may have been a battle of some sort at "Indian Green." In fact, some historians have gone so far as to assert that Anthony Wayne, or "Mad Anthony," gave the Indians at this place a startling surprise on his sortie through this country on his way to or from the "Battle of the Maumee." However, this is in very much doubt, as Wayne left Greenville and started north, where he established Fort Recovery; from thence he went to the junction of the Maumee and Auglaize rivers and established Fort Defiance; thence down the Maumee to the rapids, where he defeated the Indians with terrible loss to the enemy. Afterwards he spent a successful ninety-day campaign against the Indians and returned to Greenville. This was in the summer of 1794. History does not reveal his route back to Greenville, but says he had a successful campaign.

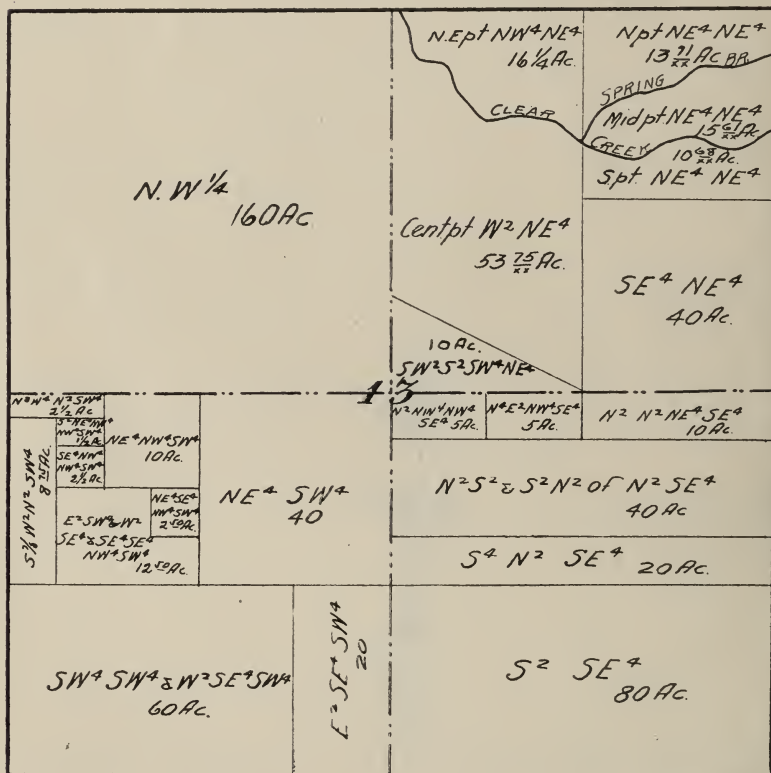

It is probable that either Wayne's entire army or some portion of it came far enough east on their march back from the "Battle of the Maumee" to reach "Indian Green" and here engaged the red men for a few demonstrations of their rude manner of conducting a battle.

There have been statements made to the effect that an Indian village was located on the present site of Mt. Blanchard, which for the present we will consider as probably true, as there were Indians in the vicinity of Mt. Blanchard as late as 1838. These were probably the remnants of some of the tribes who at different times and in different localities held sway over this vast wilderness which is now marked by all forms of civilization.

But as time rolled on in its march of civilization, farther away and fewer in number became the red men in this section of the country, until at present there is no remaining vestige to mark their happy hunting grounds; except as some weapon of defense or ornament of rank has uncovered its form from a dark and lonely bed in mother earth, and fallen into the hands of the relic hunter of to-day.

CHAPTER IV.

HANCOCK COUNTY IN THE WAR OF 1812.

More than four score years have passed since the arrogance of the English tyrannical government brought on the war of 1812, and although it ended more than five years before the erection of this county, the territory embraced within its limits was very closely allied with the earliest stages of that struggle for the preservation of the national rights and human liberty.

On the 4th of June, 1812, a resolution was passed by congress declaring war against England; on the 17th of the same month the bill passed the senate, and two days afterwards President Madison sent forth the edict. Ohio had been preparing for the conflict, and prior to the declaration of war, troops began assembling at Dayton, Springfield, Urbana and other points, in obedience to the call of Governor Meigs, and General William Hull was appointed to the chief command of the state troops. On the 16th of June the army left Urbana on its march toward the Maumee Rapids, and Colonel Duncan McArthur was ordered in advance to open a road through the forest from the Greenville treaty line to the Scioto river. Here they erected a fort, comprised of two blockhouses, and named it Fort McArthur, in honor of the officer whose regiment had opened the road.

On the 19th of June the whole army arrived at the fort, and on the 21st Colonel James Findlay was ordered to open the road as far as Blanchard's Fork. Having proceeded on his mission, he arrived at a point just north of what is now the county line between Hancock and Hardin counties. Here he was compelled, on account of rain and mud, to discontinue his march and erect a blockhouse, which was called Fort Necessity, probably named owing to the fact that through necessity the army was compelled to encamp. This fort was constructed on the southwest quarter of the southwest quarter of the southwest quarter of section thirty-six (36), township two (2) south, range ten (10) east (Madison township), now owned by Fannie Isenberger.

Previous articles written on this subject stated that this fort was erected about one-half mile west of the Perrysburg and Bellefontaine state road; however, the government survey of 1819 (the record of which is on file in the county surveyor's office), locates the site of the fort within five chains (twenty rods) of the southwest corner of section 36, which is seven-eighths of a mile west of the above mentioned road.

From this point Colonel Findlay moved to the Blanchard's Fork, and here erected a fort, which was named in honor of that officer. Here the army encamped for some time, while Colonel Findlay proceeded in advance and opened the road as far as the Maumee river.

It is surely appropriate at this time to give a somewhat brief description of what is commonly known as "Hull's Trail," as far as relates to this county. (For exact route, see map, page 32.) From Fort Necessity the trail followed the west bank of the east branch of Eagle creek to near its junction with the west branch, crossing the latter and continuing down the west side of Eagle creek to Fort Findlay. Here it crossed the river, and thence ran northward, a short distance east of the Perrysburg and Bellefontaine state road, till reaching the highlands south of the middle branch of the Portage river; thence following the course of that stream northward, into what is now Wood county, and thence to the Maumee Rapids.

There was, however, some doubt expressed by the early pioneers, as to the fact that Fort Necessity was formed by erecting a blockhouse, and claimed they never heard it mentioned as other than a mud fort. But taking quotations from "American State Papers" as authority, there evidently was a blockhouse of some sort erected at that place.

When General Hull left Fort Findlay, destined for the camp of the enemy farther to the north, he caused to remain a small garrison under Captain Arthur Thomas, to complete and guard the fort. Though no attack was ever made on Fort Findlay, it was well calculated to successfully resist any ordinary force which might be brought against it. The fort stood on the south bank of the Blanchard river in Findlay, at the northwest corner of what is now known as Main and Front streets, the southeast blockhouse being located on the site of the present Cusack Block. The fort consisted of a stockade about ten feet in height, with a two-story block house, built of round logs, at each corner. The enclosure was fifty yards square, the entrance or gate being on the east side. A ditch surrounded the stockade, the earth from the excavation having been thrown up against the pickets to give them added strength. The outer walls of the block houses projected a short distance beyond the stockade, and the upper story of each extended a few feet over the lower one, thus commanding the approaches from every direction. Each block house was thoroughly loop-holed and furnished with one piece of artillery. Within the enclosure a number of cabins for the use of the soldiers were erected along the stockade, the open space in the center being utilized as a parade ground. To guard against surprise from attacks of the enemy, the forest was cleared off for a considerable distance on the south, east and west of the fort, while the river on the north afforded a clear view.

The testimony of several early pioneers, as has frequently been published, relates some differences of opinions regarding the number of blockhouses which Fort Findlay originally contained. The earliest settlers, however, testify to having seen three block houses in a fair state of preservation, and the one at the northwest corner partly destroyed. Others coming later observed only the one standing at the southeast corner of the fort, which was used for some time by Wilson Vance as a stable. Testimonials show that when Mr. Benjamin Cox came to Fort Findlay three of the block houses were still standing and were occupied by Wyandot Indian families. The probabilities are that the portions of the stockades and block houses which were not in existence when some of the later settlers arrived had been torn down and utilized for firewood and in erecting out-buildings.

The passing years have removed and utterly obliterated all traces of Fort Findlay, due no doubt to the rapid progress of civilization. But, how sad, to think that where once stood one of the earliest structures which marked the first noble and daring stride toward civil liberty and Christian civilization, not even a wooden headboard is now visible to mark the solemn and sacred ground where died the noblest relic which ever graced the soil of our fair city, not so much on account of any great achievement that had ever been obtained, but from the motive which prompted its erection.

The following incident is so closely allied with the history of the war of 1812 as relates to Fort Findlay that it is worthy of a place in this chapter. In July, 1812, General Edward W. Tupper, of Gallia county, raised a force of one thousand men for six months' service, principally from Gallia, Lawrence and Jackson counties, who, under the orders of General Winchester, rendezvoused at Urbana. From that village General Tupper followed Hull's trail to Fort McArthur, where he established his base of supplies, and then marched northward to Fort Findlay. After a much-needed rest, his command pushed on to the foot of the Maumee Rapids. The Indians appeared in force, on the opposite bank of the Maumee. Tupper attempted to cross the river and attack the enemy, but the rapidity of the current and the feeble, half-starved condition of his men and horses rendered the attempt a failure. The enemy soon after took the offensive, and, crossing the Maumee, attacked the American camp, but were defeated and driven back with considerable loss. This defeat caused them to retreat hastily to Detroit, and Tupper subsequently marched back to Fort Findlay, and thence to Fort McArthur, where his supplies were stored.

The following anecdote, "Howe's Historical Collection," is so closely associated with Fort Findlay, as to be worthy of mention:

"About nine o'clock one dark and windy night in the late war, Catpain William Oliver, in company with a Kentuckian, left Fort Meigs for Fort Findlay on an errand of importance, the distance being about thirty-three miles. They had scarcely started on their dreary and perilous journey when they unexpectedly came upon an Indian camp, around the fires of which the Indians were busy cooking their supper. Disturbed by the noise of their approach, the savages sprang up and ran toward them. At this they reined their horses into the branches of a fallen tree. Fortunately the horses, as if conscious of the danger, stood perfectly still and the Indians passed around the tree without making any discovery in the thick darkness. At this juncture Oliver and his companion put spurs to their horses and dashed forward into the woods, through which they passed all the way to their point of destination. They arrived safely, but with their clothes completely torn off by the brambles and bushes, and their bodies bruised all over by coming in contact with the trees. They had scarcely arrived at the fort when the Indians in pursuit made their appearance, but too late, for their prey had escaped."

Fort Findlay was garrisoned until the spring of 1815, and a man named Thorp kept a small sutler store immediately east of the fort during the period of its occupation. Soon after the war closed the fort was abandoned, and its garrison returned to peaceful avocations. Below we give a picture and biography of one of the soldiers who was stationed at Fort Findlay, and took an active part in the war of 1812. We furnish this, not because he was a resident of this county at that time, for none but Indians resided here, but because some of our most distinguished citizens are his descendants.

GEORGE BREHM.

George Brehm was born in Lancaster, Pennsylvania, January 13, 1773. He was the son of Philip and Catharine Brehm, and was the grandson of George Christopher and Anna Margaret Brehm. George Christopher Brehm landed at Philadelphia from Bremen, Germany, in the ship Edinburg and qualified under the laws of the Colony of Pennsylvania, September 16, 1751.

George Brehm was a man of education, belonged to the Lutheran church, was a Democrat in politics, was strong willed and had an iron constitution. He was a weaver by trade, and of stature was tall and spare. He was married to Margaret Meyer, December 28, 1795, at Manheim, Pennsylvania. She was born March 22, 1772, at Manheim, Pennsylvania. They moved to Perry county, Ohio, in 1809 and purchased a half section of land in Reading township. His grandsons, George and Joel Brehm, still live at the old homestead.

In the war of 1812 he enlisted in Captain John Lidey's company of Ohio militia which was recruited in Fairfield county, Ohio, of which Perry county was then a part. This company started for Detroit and for a time occupied Fort Findlay. Hull surrendered while they were floundering through the Black swamp, so they escaped the disgrace of surrendering, and returned to Fort Findlay, and thence to his home. But he being impressed with the wilds of this vicinity, returned and on October 30, 1834, entered the east half of the southeast quarter of section twenty-eight (28), Union township, Hancock county, Ohio.

For his services in the war of 1812 he was granted a land warrant, number 41,687, under the act of congress of September 28, 1850. He was the grandfather of Jacob F. Burket, the present chief justice of the Ohio supreme court, who was born in the old homestead in Perry county in 1837. George Brehm died January 11, 1857, aged 83 years, 11 months and 28 days. He is buried in the family burying ground on his old farm in Reading township, Perry county, Ohio. The picture as shown above was taken when he was eighty years old.

CHAPTER V.

HANCOCK COUNTY PIONEERS.

Every country has its great warriors; its skilled scientists; its great statesmen; its modern inventors, but there is but one generation of pioneers. The history of that generation possesses a value which to future generations cannot be measured by the standard of money, time or even by imagination. Although we can imagine, or more specifically, try to stretch our imagination so that we can see the pioneer with all his earthly possessions, including family, if he had one, struggling along through miles of unbroken forests, following, not a paved street, but an Indian trail, marked only by the scarcity of timber, and the monotony now and then broken by the wierd cry of some wild animal, or the war whoop of some Indian on the warpath, or, more proper, on a drunken spree. Day after day they travel toward their destination; at night their only shelter is the dense forest. They push forward with untiring efforts, and at last arrive at the chosen spot, where together they enter the trials and dangers so common in a wild and unbroken forest. They encamp, begin to survey the surroundings, and then conclude that they see no mansion to enter, no field to cultivate, no mills to grind their corn and wheat, if they had it. What do they? They apply their sturdy energy to the destruction of the towering timber and impenetrable thickets of brush. The timber is soon carved into a log cabin; the brush and the bark of the trees form the roof. The chimney constructed of brushes or small logs laid up so as to form a hollow structure against the outside of the cabin. A hole cut through the cabin at this point served as a fire-place. The sticks composing the chimney were cemented together with mortar to prevent them from catching fire. An opening was chopped in one side of the cabin for a doorway, and any old thing was constructed for a door.

A small opening in the end of the cabin formed the window, sometimes without sash or glass. The floor was made of pieces of timber split from trees about eighteen inches in diameter and hewed smooth with the broad-ax. The beds were constructed by erecting a forked stick set in the floor and supporting two poles, the other ends of which rested on the logs at the end and side of the cabin. Stools, tables, shelves and all household furniture were constructed on the same plan. Next, a small patch must be cleared to raise some corn. In those days corn bread was the main food in the bread line. Wheat bread would have been considered a luxury. The brush for a considerable distance, owing to the size of field intended, would be cut down and piled, the trees girdled, and the surface swept by fire. In this way ten or fifteen acres could be cleared in a short time. Probably now and then the monotony of this tiresome work would be broken by a deer or bear crossing in its usual path to some unknown destination, and it in return would have its monotonous trip disturbed by a leaden ball from the gun of the new trespasser, which resulted in a fine boiled venison or bear meat supper for the weary workers. Thus on and on in this manner the struggles and dangers which the early pioneer had undergone still continued until the gradual approach of higher civilization; the broad extensions of cleared fields; the on-coming of more farmers; the starting of small settlements; the encouragement of manufacturers, merchants and all classes of business operations, which has caused the pioneer life of that day to pass into a phase of life that has now departed from this state forever.

Ninety years ago there was not a single white family living in Hancock county. Could those who have seen this county as it now is only borrow the eyes of the early pioneer, who helped to make the transformation, in place of smiling fields, comfortable homes and pleasant driveways, naught but a vast wilderness, filled with savage beasts and occasionally a savage red man would greet their sight. The present generation can form no just conception of the trials, endless privations and innumerable sacrifices to which the early settlers heroically submitted. They were not seeking fortunes or fame; the one prevailing intention was to make a home for their loving wife and innocent children, and from that one motive in view we now behold the splendid structure of that civilization we see all around us.

The pioneers of Hancock county, with few exceptions, have all passed to that beyond, where trials, persecutions and privations are unknown, and it remains for their descendants and future generations to keep ever before them the recollections of such names and events as have come down to them from their early ancestors, for the remembrance of their deeds deserves to be "written in characters of living light upon the firmament, there to endure as radiant as if every letter was traced in shining stars."

The first settlers of Hancock county came not to enjoy a life of idleness and ease. They doubtless admired the unveiled scene that met their gaze, the vernal green forest and the unlimited works of nature; they could look forward with happy anticipation to the lives they were to lead in the midst of all this beauty, and to the rich reward that would be theirs from the cultivation of the fertile soil. The dangers to which they were exposed were somewhat serious. The Indians could not be trusted out of sight, and the many stories of their depredations in the earlier eastern settlements made the pioneers of Hancock county apprehensive of trouble. The wild animals were a cause of dread and a source of annoyance. In fact, among the lovely surroundings of those early days there was a sense of loneliness that could not be dispelled.

The constant feeling of isolation caused many stout hearts to turn back to the old stamping ground from which they came, where existed the comforts of life, the companionship of friends and the sociability of neighbors. But to those who held out in the struggle for existence in this newly settled country the sense of loneliness and isolation was dispelled as the settlements increased; social gatherings became more numerous and undoubtedly more enjoyable, and, step by step, life in all its numerous phases took on a new and more glorious appearance, until today we are at the very height of civilization, in all its numerous classes, and the present generation becomes the possessor of all the advancements produced through the privations and enduring sacrifices of our early pioneers. They suffered for our sake, just as our Christ suffered the pangs of death on the cross that we might live.

CHAPTER VI.

SURFACE, SOIL, DRAINAGE.

The surface of Hancock county is somewhat varied. Some portions are rolling, others flat and marshy—some portions were covered with dense forests and thickets, while others bore no forests.

In the northern part of this county there was a strip of forest known as "The Wild Cat Thicket," which was from one to two miles in width, and had its beginning in the western portion of Portage township, extending across Allen and Cass townships, and terminating in the western part of Washington township. From its appearance the early settlers concluded the forest had been blown down years before by a raging storm from the west, as the trees were blown toward the east. Overgrown with small timber and forest vegetation it formed a dense thicket where wild game found a safe retreat from the vigilant hunter. It is supposed that numerous wild cats inhabited this locality in an early day, and the place finally became known as "Wild Cat Thicket."

From the east part of Marion township a flat marsh extends in a southeasterly direction across Biglick township and into Seneca county. It covered about 2,000 acres, and from the fact that it bore no forest it became known as "The Prairie."

In the southwestern part of Union township, and the northwestern part of Orange township is a narrow strip of land, originally low and wet. A small portion of this tract was prairie, but the balance was covered with a dense growth of swamp willow which made it almost impenetrable. This entire tract was known as "Cranberry Marsh." "The Swamp" and the "Fallen Timbers," in Amanda township, were once covered by forest timbers, but probably from some great fire destroying the dense growth of vegetation the roots were so burned as to destroy the trees and caused them to fall, thus blocking the drainage and making it have the appearance of a "swamp."

A narrow sand ridge, upon which the Benton Ridge road is located, runs southwest from Findlay through the village of Benton Ridge to the Putnam county line. Two sand ridges enter the northeast corner of the county and passing westward unite as one ridge on Section 5, Washington township, thence runs in a southwesterly direction across Cass, Allen, Portage and Pleasant townships, where it is known as Sugar Ridge, because of the large number of sugar trees that once grew upon it.

Fostoria, Van Buren and McComb are located on this ridge. Another of these narrow belts enters the northeast corner of Portage township from Wood county and runs southwest, parallel with and about two miles north of Sugar Ridge. In the geological reports of the state these ridges are called "the ancient beaches of Lake Erie."

"Limestone Ridge" is an elevated belt of sand and clay underlaid with limestone, lying south of the prairie in Biglick township. It was so named on account of the numerous flakes of limestone found scattered over its surface, probably the result of a great natural upheaval during the first stages of the earth's formation. Good limestone is quarried in abundance along the streams, and in several other parts of the county away from the water courses. It is used principally in the manufacture of lime, foundations for buildings and the construction of macadamized streets and roads.

The drainage of Hancock is not unlike the drainage of any other part of the country. The Blanchard river is the great vein carrying the powerful liquid from the smaller tributaries in the southern and middle portion of our county into the larger body, the Auglaize, and from thence into the Maumee, where it is emptied into Lake Erie.

The Blanchard river, according to Colonel Johnston's story, was called by the Wyandots "Quegh-tu-wa," or "Clans-in-the-water," while the Shawnees named it "Sha-po-qua-te-sepi," or "Tailor's river." His story was that one Blanchard, a French tailor, settled among the Shawnees, married a squaw, reared a family of seven children, and lived and died upon this stream long prior to the cession of the territory, which it drains, to the United States. The early surveyors of Ohio named the stream Blanchard's fork of the Auglaize, and thus perpetuates the memory of Blanchard.

Others have spoken of Jean Jacques Blanchard as French by nationality, tailor by trade, adventurer by disposition and non-communicative about himself from choice. It is certain that he died in 1802, while evidence points to the belief that he died on the site of old Fort Findlay. He spoke Parisian French, is said to have had an intimate acquaintance with Greek and Latin, and had a liberal education. He was a man with all a Frenchman's culture and refinement and the wonder is what he was doing out in the forsaken wilds of the Northwest Territory, married to a Shawnee squaw, devoted to twelve little half-breed sons and daughters and plying his trade up and down the banks of the little river which soon became known as his especial property.

He came from Louisiana in 1770. Seven years before that is a blank. He never gave any account of his wanderings during this time so the historians have accredited him to a Spanish pirate ship which he is supposed to have tired of. No one seems to know how he got to the point east of Dayton, where he first joined the Shawnees in 1770. It is known, too, that he emigrated to Louisiana in 1760, and was there two years, but the seven years intervening is food for the building of historic theories. One theory is that he fled from his home in France for some offense which should not have been committed and in his wanderings landed in this, the new world. It is claimed that he was well skilled in carving and making various ornaments, and with his curiously wrought tools amused the Indians by his work in this art. He lived thirty years with his Shawnee wife, and when the Indians emigrated seven of his children were still living. In 1857 part of the tribe with which he identified himself moved to Iowa, Blanchard's son being chief of the division, and to this day there are Indians who trace their geneology back to the point where Blanchard appeared on the stage of Indian life.

The Blanchard rises near Kenton, the county seat of Hardin county, on the north slope of the dividing ridge between the Ohio river and Lake Erie. Flowing northward it enters Hancock county and passing onward through the townships of Delaware, Jackson and Amanda, to the northeast corner of Section 23, Marion township, turns abruptly westward and with a slight northerly bearing reaches Findlay; thence meandering in the same general direction across Findlay, Liberty and Blanchard townships into Putnam county forms a junction with the Auglaize river in the western part of the last mentioned county. The banks of the Blanchard, though in places somewhat hilly and broken, generally stretch away into level bottoms, which are subject to overflows during the spring freshets. The stream has furnished water power in the past for various grist mills and numerous sawmills in this county, and has been of great benefit to the country through which it flows. Its principal tributaries are, from the south, Eagle, Tawa, Riley and Lye creeks and from the north Howard Run and various other moderate streams, better known as ditches.

The north part of the county is drained northward by several branches of the Portage river and Beaver creek, and taken altogether the water privilege and natural drainage facilities of the county are ample and sufficient.

Every sort of crop indigenous to this part of Ohio is successfully cultivated in Hancock county. Wheat is perhaps the greatest crop raised here. Corn and oats are raised in large quantities, while barley, rye, buckwheat, flax, hay and clover are also cultivated to a considerable extent. Potatoes yield large crops and of recent years strawberries, onions, celery, and indeed, all sorts of fruits and vegetables grown in this latitude are raised in Hancock county. The apple, the pear, the peach, the plum and the cherry, together with the quince have their places in nearly all the orchards of any size in the county.

CHAPTER VII.

HANCOCK COUNTY IN THE MEXICAN WAR.

The disputed territory lying between the Nurces and Rio Grande rivers was the direct cause of the Mexican war. Texas, which, having already won its independence, and was afterwards admitted into the union, claimed the Rio Grande as the boundary line, while the Mexican authorities disputed this claim, asserting that it was the Nurces river. The United States government proposed to settle the controversy by peaceful negotiations, but Mexico scornfully refused, and made threats of occupying the territory in dispute.

The Americans in the meantime had been preparing for war, which from the actions of the Mexican authorities, seemed inevitable. In March, 1846, General Taylor was ordered to advance to the Rio Grande with a few thousand men, which he had organized at Corpus Christi, near the mouth of the River Nurces. He erected Fort Brown, opposite Matamoras, which was accepted by Mexico as a declaration of war, and on the 26th of April, 1846, General Arista, the Mexican commander on the Rio Grande, notified General Taylor that hostilities had begun.

On the same day a small force of American cavalry was attacked by the Mexicans on the east side of the Rio Grande, and here occurred the first bloodshed of the war. Hancock county was then very thinly settled, and when the call for troops reached this portion of Ohio the quota of the state was full. A company, however, was recruited from Hancock and Putnam counties and offered to the governor, who replied that their services were not needed. However, a dozen or more from this county went to the war, but the greater part of them enlisted in other outside companies and there being no enumeration returns to show just who went from this county, I am unable to give the list of names of parties from this county in full, but by diligent search and inquiry I determined the following named parties who, when they enlisted, were residents of this county: Allen Royce, Jeremiah Yates, Loami Farmer, and Dr. Wm. D. Carlin. Mr. Carlin was commissioned as assistant surgeon in the Fifteenth United States Regulars April 9, 1847, but the surgeon having other duties which required the most of his time, Mr. Carlin, though not in name, but by active service, filled the position of surgeon. His commission was signed by James K. Polk, then president of the United States.

The news was soon spread abroad that the victorious American army had reached the City of Mexico, which was hailed with patriotic enthusiasm all over the country.

Some of the Whig leaders saw or pretended to see a scheme for the extension of slavery from the outcome of this conflict and bitterly denounced the war, but the patriotism of the nation was aroused to its full extent, and the government of the people was nobly sustained by the people in its triumphant appeal to arms.

CHAPTER VIII.

RAILROADS.

Railroads being one of the important features toward internal improvements, I deem it proper to give a brief outline of the facts connected with the establishment of such roads through this county. In March, 1839, the general assembly passed an act "to authorize the commissioners of Wood and Hancock counties to subscribe to the capital stock of the Bellefontaine and Perrysburg Railroad company and to borrow money." In accordance with this act the commissioners of Hancock county held a meeting April 26, 1839, and decided to subscribe 1,000 shares, amounting to $100,000, to the capital stock of said company, and chose Parlee Carlin as a special agent to negotiate a loan. The loan was never negotiated as the project went glimmering and vanished out of sight.

On February 19, 1845, the legislature came to the rescue of another anticipated project and passed "An act to authorize the commissioners of Hancock county to subscribe to the capital stock of the Mad River & Lake Erie Railroad company the sum of $60,000, or such sums as shall be sufficient to construct a railway, or branch, from the main track of said railroad to the town of Findlay." The question was submitted to the voters of Hancock county at the following April election and carried by a vote of 1,055 to 764. On April 11, 1845, the board subscribed $60,000 to the capital stock of said railroad, and on April 22, $30,000 in county bonds were issued. Wilson Vance, William Taylor, John Patterson and William L. Henderson were appointed agents to represent the county interests in this project. In June, 1845, the commissioners added John Ewing and Jacob Barnd to the list of agents. September 11, 1845, the commissioners appointed Squire Carlin in place of Jacob Barnd (who died soon after his appointment), and the commissioners increased the subscription $15,000, making a total of $75,000.

On August 19, 1846, the railroad company met at Kenton and agreed to accept the subscription, and to construct the road.

On September 22, 1846, the commissioners appointed John Patterson, John Ewing and Hiram Smith railroad agents, to transact all business in the building and completion of said proposed railroad. They were authorized to borrow money, obtain right-of way, put the work under contract and carry out all other business relative to the completion of the road.

In March, 1847, Hiram Smith resigned, and Charles W. O'Neal and William L. Henderson were appointed, and, with Messrs. Patterson and Ewing, served till March, 1851, when the office was terminated by order of the commissioners.

The road was completed in November, 1849 and trains began running before the close of that month. The railing was strips of strap-iron five-eighths of an inch in thickness; the bed was made of sleepers laid lengthwise of the track, and resting upon these were the ties laid crosswise; immediately over the sleepers were two strips of timber, to which were fastened the strap-iron rails. When all was finished the county had expended only $45,500, leaving $29,500 of the subscription yet unissued. In 1852-3 the subject of T-railway was much talked of, but nothing was done until October, 1868, when the attention of the commissioners was called to the unexpended balance, and they gladly issued the $12,000 in bonds, the amount needed for T-railing. The work of T-railing was commenced in the spring of 1869 and was completed October 21, 1869. This road still remains as one of the landmarks, and although the name has at divers times been changed the road still continues to do a vast amount of business, and is the only entrance of the Big Four system into Findlay. Although this road was built and paid for by Hancock county, the road has probably many times paid for itself in accommodation to the early settlers and the helping hand it gave to assist in the development of the county. Thus was built the first railroad in the county.

The Lake Erie & Western was the second railroad built through this county. It was started, in the minds of a few of the early advocates, in 1853. In April, 1853, the voters of Hancock county voted to subscribe $100,000 to the capital stock of the Dayton & Michigan Railroad company.

In August, 1853, one hundred bonds of $1,000 each were signed and delivered by the commissioners. The transfer was bitterly opposed and through a bitter fight, which resulted in the company returning $91,000 of the amount, and the county being sued and paying the remaining $9,000 the project fell flat. However, in 1857, the proposed improvement gained headway by popular subscription and by January, 1859, the road was completed from Fremont to Fostoria. In March, 1860, trains were running to the Findlay depot on West Main Cross street. November 21, 1872, the last rail connecting Lima with Findlay was laid. Step by step, and consolidation after consolidation eventually ended in a through line from Sandusky, Ohio, to Bloomington, Illinois.

The Baltimore & Ohio railroad was built through the northeast corner of Hancock county in 1873 and opened for business January 1, 1874. Although a very small portion of this road lies in Hancock county it is worthy of mention as it is one of the greatest trunk lines of the United States. For want of time and space I will only make mention of the other railroads through this county.

The McComb, Deshler & Toledo Railroad company was incorporated June 2, 1879, by a number of McComb citizens, and on November 24, 1880, the first train came into McComb. Later, the branch was extended to Findlay and is now known as the C., H. & D. branch.

The New York, Chicago & St. Louis Railroad company was incorporated in 1880 to construct a line from New York to Chicago. Findlay made an effort to secure this road, but it was finally located over the old Continental bed in this county, from Arcadia westward, but running northeast from Arcadia to Fostoria parallel with the L. E. & W. R. R. The road through this county was begun in the spring of 1881 and trains running by July, 1881.

The Cleveland, Delphos & St. Louis railroad was chartered March 9, 1881, and during the summer work was commenced. The road from Bluffton to Arlington was completed early in the fall of 1882, and in December the construction train reached Mt. Blanchard. Early in the spring of 1883 it run its trains to Carey. It is now known as the Northern Ohio.

The Toledo, Columbus & Southern railroad was chartered in May, 1881, and in the winter of 1881-2 the right-of-way was obtained between Toledo and Findlay. Work was commenced in the summer of 1882. The first rail was laid December 15, and the first locomotive ran into Bowling Green from Toledo on Christmas day. January 30, 1883, the connecting rail was laid some fifteen miles north of Findlay in Wood county, which connected Findlay with Toledo. The first through train came over the road from Toledo to Findlay February 7, 1883. The road was established through the southern part of the county in 1886. This road at present extends from Toledo to Columbus and is one of the busiest roads through this county. The road is now known as the Toledo & Ohio Central railroad.

The American Midland railroad was commenced and constructed through the western part of this county in 1888. Its eastern terminus is Findlay, O., and the western terminus Fort Wayne, Ind. The road has recently passed under the control of the C., H. & D. Railroad company. This comprises all the steam railroads now operating in this county, and the distribution of the same make the transportation and railroad communication in all this county about equally distributed, and needless to say is one of the greatest assistants known to the civilized world in developing and revolutionizing trade industry.

CHAPTER IX.

THE UNDERGROUND RAILROAD.

In 1854, or about seven years prior to the breaking out of the civil war, runaway negroes were harbored and taken care of by organizations, who furnished financial assistance to aid in the escapade of these runaway slaves to Canada. A line of stations existed at intervals of ten to thirty miles, and the travel over the line was entirely at night. "Conductors" were engaged to pilot the runaways in safety, while agents and sympathizers through the south enticed negroes from their masters, and furnished them with means to escape to the north, where they would be cared for and sent on into Canada. The method, organization, manner of concealment, etc., can best be related by the following article written by Mr. C. A. Croninger, of this city, who was one of the contributors to this institution and who has kindly furnished me with the following at my request:

"Dear Sir and Friend:

"At your request I take pleasure in giving you a few items relating to what I know of what was termed the 'Grapevine Telegraph and Underground railway' through Hancock county. In May, 1854, as memory serves me, I arrived in Findlay, Ohio, and became actively engaged in the mercantile business on the corner of Main and Main Cross streets in this city, in the wooden block known as Headquarters. I soon made the acquaintance of many of the farmers of the county and quite a number who hailed from Richland and Ashland counties, some of whom I had met in those counties. Among others was our respected and worthy citizen, Uncle John King, who lived and owned the farm three and one-half miles north of town on the Perrysburg road (East Side). Our old acquaintance being renewed he sounded my sentiments on the slavery question. I frankly told him that I was somewhat pro-slavery in sentiment, yet I had a horror of many of the doings in southern slave-holding states, and while I had no intention nor a disposition to interfere with the institution of slavery in the states where it existed by law, yet I would not aid a slave owner in capturing a runaway. This was just what my friend wished to know and in the course of several talks with him and his reliance on my sentiments expressed, told me of an organization that was in existence styled the 'underground railroad' to aid refugees who were fleeing from slavery to Canada and freedom, and asked me to contribute what aid I felt like doing to keep up 'steam' and pay the 'engineer,' 'fireman' and 'conductor' on the popular line, which I gladly assented to do. One regular station of some importance was near Williamstown, better known as 'Bill Town,' and a flag station a mile or two this side of Arlington. The refugees usually came in squads of three, four, five or six. The agents at such stations would secrete the 'passengers' during the day and a train get away after dusk, 'passengers' carefully secreted under cover of a good bunch of loose hay, and from the 'Bill Town Station' to North Findlay, where they changed 'cars and conductors' to the next station in Wood county known as 'Slocums.' The North Findlay 'station agent' was the 'operator' of the 'Grapevine Telegraph Line,' and usually delivered the message verbally, about thus: 'Travel somewhat heavy this week, 6 and 4'—which meant 50 cents—or 'is somewhat light, 5'—which meant 25 cents from me. A nearby neighbor of mine, a very strong anti-slavery man (A. Bushon) also contributed his mite to the general expenses of the railroad.

"I called, on several occasions, at the station and on two occasions had interviews with some of the passengers, many of whom were rather bright to be profitable slaves, and this station was on the edge of the highway and a good opportunity for passengers to see the passer-by. On one occasion while two southern slave hunters stopped at the Reed house (now Phoenix Inn) in Findlay, on the track of fugitives, they were directed to the station where they were supposed to be and a telegraph by the 'grapevine' line (none other at this time than W. C. Cox and his spirited steed) was dispatched to the station in time so the passengers were secreted in a smoke house, the door locked, and key mislaid, and the owners were disappointed in catching any travelers they were after. The evening following, the train left the station, taking a roundabout route and succeeded in evading these southerners. As the train was well guarded and conductor and trainmen as well as the passengers were well armed, there would have been trouble had the train been held up; but fortunately they arrived near Perrysburg safely, while their pursuers were ahead of the line and having a good time in Toledo.

"The funds raised went to pay the expenses as before mentioned, at the rate of 100 to 200 (cents) for a team and driver that conveyed four passengers twelve to sixteen miles; and occasionally a team would drive twenty-four miles and at other times thirty-four miles, returning home with a number of empty sacks lying loose in the bed of the wagon, so that inquisitors could see that the party had been to market and had made sale of their load.

"I was told that two slave-hunters from Kentucky followed some fugitives on the route so closely that the sheriff of Hancock county, Ohio, was called to their aid to help capture four passengers supposed to be in the station and before the sheriff and his posse were ready to carry out the program became pretty well filled up with good spirits and having a good time, as the 'grapevine line' was ahead and the inmates of the station were in the wooded district, safely secreted, and the officer and posse returned without the capture of the runaways. The passengers tarried a day or more to aid the station agent to cut and harvest a field of grain on the farm.

"The aid rendered the refugees was not a lucrative business to those engaged in it by any means, as it required time, patience and money to carry it on; also it was well known that an attorney at (Portland) Sandusky City had been fined by court under the federal laws of the United States $1,000 for aiding runaway slaves, and that the law would await any others that were caught aiding or abetting these poor runaways.

"The station agent near 'Bill Town,' whose name is not remembered, was said to have been an indefatigable worker in this line, as was our friend King. The latter was up in years, so that he could not well spend the hours of night away from home, but had on hand or secured those that were quite as efficient as he would have been in his stead. I remember of being told that no less than twenty fugitives in one week went through Findlay, and often ten to twelve. The heavy runs were in 1856 to 1860, but the organization and route had been doing business years before."

John A. Woods.

It was later learned that the station agent at "Bill Town" was none other than John A. Woods, who lived one mile north of "Bill Town," and his son, James P. Woods, of this city, present sidewalk inspector, when but seventeen years of age was one of the parties who helped to convey the runaway slaves from the "Bill Town" station to Uncle John King's north of Findlay. Mr. J. P. Woods related to the writer that at one time just prior to the breaking out of the civil war in 1861 he conveyed a man, wife and child on horseback to the North Findlay station, the husband riding one horse and carrying the child, while the mother rode behind him (Mr. Woods) on the other horse. On his way back he spent the balance of the night in Mr. Ballentine's stable on West Crawford street, and after himself and horses were fed started on a roundabout way home until he reached Chamberlin's hill, south of town. Here he was met by a party who inquired his business at Findlay at so early an hour. Mr. Woods replied: "It is none of your business," to which the inquisitor answered he would make it his business. Mr. Woods replied that he was on the public highway, and had no right to be disturbed, and backed up his reply by presenting a well-loaded revolver as convincing evidence. The party strode on to Findlay and among others inquired of Mr. Ballentine, who kept a hotel, who the party of a certain description was, and Mr. Ballentine said he did not know unless it was someone who had brought parties to the train to go away on the Carey branch. Thus one of the investigators was misled. Story after story of this character could be told of the workings of the underground railroad. Parties were even taken from Delaware as far north as John King's and passed through Findlay in broad daylight. Mr. Woods stated that as many as thirty-one runaway slaves were in hiding among the hay at their barn at one time. The party who run the flag station, two miles north and one and a half miles west of Arlington, was Francis Bartley.

CHAPTER X.

HANCOCK COUNTY IN THE CIVIL WAR.

War! War!! War!!! Since the days of the Revolution were the people of this county, this state, this nation so thoroughly aroused as when the news flashed over the wires and also from tongue to ear that Fort Sumter had fallen.

From all sections of the free states, regardless of political affiliation, voices went up with fierce determination to sustain the government and punish the traitors. History furnishes few examples of such patriotic devotion and such unanimity of sentiment and feeling. Volunteer companies sprang into existence as if by magic, and large amounts were contributed by state legislatures, private corporations and individuals to defray the expenses of the coming struggle for national unity. Hancock county was in harmony with the patriotic sentiments of the nation, and enthusiastic expressions of loyalty to our time-honored flag fell from the lips of old and young.

Findlay being the county seat, was the principal point where public sentiment found outward expression and the action taken here will serve to illustrate the patriotism of the people throughout the county.

Early on the morning of April 17, 1861, a few national flags were thrown to the breeze, the sight of which seemed to kindle a patriotic fire in every heart. Presently a large American banner was suspended across Main street from the court house to Reed's hotel.

The town soon began to present a lively appearance, and when the band headed by the Stars and Stripes commenced promenading Main street the martial spirit in many loyal hearts broke forth in cheers. About 10 o'clock a. m. a cannon, owned by the local Democratic organization, was brought forth and accompanied by several hundred citizens on foot and horseback was taken across the river and a salute of thirty-four shots fired in honor of the union. Enthusiasm was abundant, and party lines were entirely forgotten. Towards noon another large banner was suspended across Main street, and flags of every size were floating from nearly every business block and numerous private residences. Two liberty poles were raised in the afternoon on the opposite corners of Main and Main Cross streets, and the American flag run up on each. Afterwards other poles were raised from fifty to eighty feet in height and mounted with the Stars and Stripes, all of which taken together made the appearance of a vast military camp.

Pursuant to a call issued April 17, 1861, a large and enthusiastic assemblage of citizens convened at the court house on the following afternoon. Edson Goit was made chairman and Philip Ford and S. J. Mills appointed secretaries. Mr.

Goit on taking the chair delivered a patriotic speech, which was frequently interrupted by outbursts of applause. He said the government should be sustained at all hazards and the man who in this emergency opposed the execution of the laws be denounced as a traitor.

On motion of J. M. Palmer, a committee consisting of Messrs. Aaron Blackford, J. M. Palmer, A. P. Byal, W. W. Siddall and Israel Green was appointed to draft resolutions expressing the sentiment of the meeting. During the absence of the committee the enthusiasm was kept at fever heat by patriotic, soul-stirring and at the same time appropriate music and speeches. The band played "Hail, Columbia," and the "Star-Spangled Banner" was called for and sung by Messrs. N. Y. Mifford, Dwella M. Stoughton and William Mungen, the vast audience rising and joining in the chorus. At the close of each verse cheer after cheer was given by the assembled multitude till the very building seemed to join in the enthusiastic patriotism of the people and echo back their sentiments.

James A. Bope made a brief speech denouncing treason and secession, and calling upon all to rally around the flag. Amidst frequent applause William Mungen declared himself "in favor of our country, right or wrong." The time, he said, was now past for party questions, and as a Democrat of the strictest school, he asserted that in the present alarming condition of the country, political questions should be forgotten. William Gribben was the next speaker. He said that armed traitors had conspired together for the destruction of our government, that our national flag had been insulted and trampled upon by the enemies of our country, and declared the honor of the glorious old banner should be upheld. At this point the committee on resolutions presented the following report, which was, amid vociferous applause, adopted:

"Whereas, A band of armed traitors to the government of the United States have leagued together for the avowed purpose of overthrowing the constitution and laws of our beloved country, and to insult and strike down the ensign of our nation, which has given to the American citizen ample protection at home and abroad, and to our country consideration and dignity wherever its stars and stripes have been seen and known; and

"Whereas, In pursuance of such treasonable intent, those traitors have once struck down that glorious flag, and now threaten with a myridian host in arms to seize our national capital, to trail our nation's honor in the dust and transform this free government into a cruel monarchy; therefore,

"Resolved, That whatever differences of opinion have divided us in the past, today we are united and are animated by one purpose, and that is an unyielding and undying devotion to the Union, and determination to stand by the government and flag of our country. Living, we will stand shoulder to shoulder and fight in their defense; dying we bequeath this purpose to our children.

"Resolved, That in the present civil war so wantonly begun by traitors now in arms against our government, the only issue presented to every American citizen is: Shall our constitutional government stand against the rebel and revolutionary force that now threatens its destruction? Or shall it yield to treason for a despotism to be erected upon its ruins? 'He that is not with us is against us.'

"Resolved, That as our revolutionary fathers with a firm reliance on the protection of Divine Providence eventually pledged to each other their lives, their fortunes and their sacred honor for the purchase of those civil and religious liberties by them transmitted to us, and that we have so long enjoyed, we, their descendants, with a firm reliance upon the same Divine and all-protecting Power, mutually make the same sacred pledge to each other for the preservation and perpetuity of that inestimable inheritance by them bequeathed to us."

Upon the adoption of the foregoing resolution, Judge Palmer addressed the meeting in an eloquent speech full of patriotic devotion.

James M. Neibling was then called for and began by saying that fourteen years before, when only a boy, he shouldered his musket at the call of his country to assist in chastising Mexican arrogance, and he was ready to go again if his country's cause demanded his services. This declaration was received with unbounded applause. After some further remarks upon the necessity of union and immediate action he presented the roll of enlistment for volunteers, under the call of President Lincoln for 75,000 men, issued three days before. In a very short time seventy-two names were down upon the roll, and the meeting then adjourned with cheers and expressions of loyalty to the flag. The volunteers were formed into line by Colonel Neibling and escorted by the band, marched down Main street and disbanded to meet for another rally on Tuesday, April 23, which had been previously announced.

The news went abroad for a grand rally at Findlay on that day, and probably never before were so many people seen in the town. They came from every part of the county, all seeming to be moved by the one prevailing sentiment of loyalty. Nothing was talked of but the defense and preservation of the Union. And in this great cause none were more deeply interested than the old gray-headed veterans who had so long enjoyed its blessings. Scores of pioneers publicly declared their readiness to shoulder a musket and march to the defense of their country. All seemed to be imbued with that same spirit of patriotic devotion and sacrifice which nerved the revolutionary fathers to win that glorious boon of liberty we now enjoy. Party prejudice was set aside, and all labored together, hand in hand in that noble work of preserving the national honor.

By this time three companies of volunteers had been raised in Hancock county, which were afterwards mustered into the Twenty-first regiment, Ohio volunteer infantry, as companies A, F and G, the officers of which you will find together with the privates in another part of this book.

In the afternoon companies A and F were each presented by the ladies of Findlay with a handsome flag. The presentation took place in front of the court house, in the presence of the large assemblage which had come together on that day to attest their unswerving loyalty. Mrs. James M. Neibling made the presentation speech, and the flags were respectively received by Captain Wilson and Walker on behalf of their companies.

The volunteers rendezvoused at the fair grounds, then located in East Findlay, on the Mt. Blanchard road, which was dedicated as "Camp Neibling," in honor of the gallant Colonel James M. Neibling, who was ever foremost in promoting the good cause, and who afterward commanded the Twenty-first regiment on many a bloody field. On the 25th of April, Mrs. Mary Mungen, on behalf of the ladies of Findlay, presented a flag to company G; before the following day a delegation of ladies from McComb put in an appearance at Camp Neibling and presented another flag to the same company, most of which command were from the northwest part of the county. Miss Addie M. Price presented the beautiful banner, and Captain Lovell received it and responded in appropriate terms.

On Saturday, April 27, a mass meeting was held at the court house for the purpose of arranging for a more thorough military organization of the county. James M. Neibling was elected chairman, and D. B. Beardsley secretary. Speeches were made by Messrs. James M. Neibling, Aaron Blackford and Abel F. Parker, advocating the proposed measure; and committees were appointed in each township to carry the project into effect. Meetings were soon afterward held in nearly every township, military companies organized, and the patriotic ardor of the people was unabated. Several companies of home guards were also formed, consisting of men over forty-five years of age; but these organizations subsequently disbanded, because the term "Home Guard" soon became one of reproach, and was flippantly used to designate stay-at-homes or a class who were afraid to go into the army.

Our space is too much limited to give a full description of the principal events relative to preparations and active service in this great struggle for freedom, as a complete list of soldiers, etc., is elsewhere found in this volume, so we must content our readers with a very limited description. We cannot, however, pass by the fact that a vast amount of credit is due the various societies organized at divers times during the rebellion towards providing for the families of those who were willing to give their service and, if need be, their lives for the cause of freedom. And especially is this true of the ladies of these societies, who did a great amount of good in gathering and forwarding sanitary supplies to hospital camps. In fact, the patriotic women of the county did their full share toward crushing the mightiest rebellion in the history of the world, not only in actions and deeds naturally performed which relieved the soldiers in the field, but in enduring the heart-aches, and responsibility of both parents' fondness and care over their children, where at such ages as they at that time had obtained, their future was being molded and shaped.

But all these heart-aches and thoughts of bloody war were somewhat soothed when the news that Richmond was captured had spread over the country; it created the most intense excitement, but it was one of joy. Bell-ringing, hand-shaking and congratulations were the order of the day.

The citizens turned out en masse; bonfires were lighted in every town and village, and an undercurrent of deep thankfulness pervaded the entire community. All hailed the good news as a harbinger of peace and happiness. With the fall of the rebel capital the war was comparatively at an end; and though Lee struggled bravely to save his army from the iron grasp of Grant, its fate was sealed. On the 9th of April, 1865, he surrendered to Grant at Appomattox court house, and nine days afterward Johnston gave up his army to Sherman.

Throughout the north the news of these glorious successes of the Union arms was received with unbounded enthusiasm, and heartfelt prayers were offered to the God of battles, who in His infinite mercy had vouchsafed such a brilliant ending to the long turmoil of civil strife. After four years of bloody war—after the sacrifice of hundreds of thousands of gallant men and millions of treasure, the great rebellion was at an end, the government preserved, and freedom perpetuated.

According to previous announcement, a grand celebration was held at Findlay, April 14, 1865, to rejoice over the dawn of a glorious peace. The day was bright and cheerful, and nature seemed to smile on the exalted happiness of the people.

The exercises commenced at six o'clock in the morning with the ringing of bells, and the firing of a salute of thirty-six guns. As the day wore on, crowds of people came pouring into Findlay. At ten o'clock services were held in several of the churches, and shortly after noon a large audience gathered at the court house, where appropriate addresses were delivered by Revs. Rose and Wykes. In the evening there was a fine display of fireworks, and every business house, as well as many of the private dwellings, were brilliantly illuminated.

This joy, however, was short lived, and suddenly changed to deep mourning. About ten o'clock the news of President Lincoln's assassination reached Findlay, and fell like a pall on the hearts of her citizens. Everyone was horror-stricken at the awful deed, and never was there so much feeling manifested by the true and loyal hearts of Hancock county. In a short time all of the business houses were closed and draped in mourning, and the flags dressed in crepe and raised at half-mast. In the afternoon a public meeting was held at the court house to express the sentiments of the people on the assassination of the president, and deep gloom filled every honest heart.

Soon after the war ended, the Union armies were discharged, and the soldiers still remaining, returned to their homes, and once more joy reigned supreme around hundreds of firesides in Hancock county. To the survivors and their children has been vouchsafed the blessing to witness the grand results of all their sacrifices, in a reunited country pursuing a common destiny, while the name and fame of those who fell, either on the battlefield or in the line of duty, has been commemorated through the pages of history and on the beautiful monuments of marble and bronze prominent in city, town and village all over this fair land of ours. They all went out with one common aim in view—to lay down their life, if necessary, to aid in the cause of freedom. They went cheerfully wherever duty called them. They never shirked duty and never flinched under fire. They never retreated unless ordered so to do. They endured all the hardships of marching, fighting, and of prisons, and more than five hundred of them laid down their lives without a murmur, that the noble cause, for which they fought, might be sustained for the benefit of future generations. They left father, mother, brother, sister, wife, children, all that was near and dear to them in this life, well knowing that for the last time they might look at their families' loving faces, and into their aching hearts; and for four long and weary years, both those at home and those engaged in the fight for freedom, endured the hardships of one of the most bloody and cruel wars on record.

But space is somewhat limited, else one could write a volume on this one subject, but enough has been said to lead the reader into a sort of meditating mood, where he can think and imagine for him or herself.

List of soldiers found elsewhere in this volume.

CHAPTER XI.

THE BAR OF HANCOCK COUNTY.

There is, perhaps, no subject in pioneer history of more general interest than that of law. The majority of men have at one time or another been brought in close contact with it in some way, and this condition will continue as long as men exist.

The early struggles of the average lawyer in any community were something that the young beginner of today knows nothing of. His trials and tribulations are as nothing compared to the continued battles for existence of his pioneer predecessors. The pioneer bar of Hancock county had some giant intellects as well as a few of the pettifogging order, and all were alike obliged to bide their time in the days when 'coon skins and any old thing was legal tender, and when cases of litigation were few and far between. And beyond doubt these men hewed their way through the legal wilderness just as truly as did the farmer through the material forest that in early days covered the entire land.

EDSON GOIT.

Edson Goit was the first resident lawyer of Findlay. He was a native of Oswego county, New York, and was born October 18, 1808. When he was quite small his father died, but, through improving every opportunity during his boyhood years he managed to obtain a fair education and taught school ere reaching his majority. In 1827 he left his early home and traveled across Ohio, until arriving at the village of Fremont. Here he halted, and subsequently taught school in Fremont and Tiffin. During this period Mr. Goit read law under Rudolphus Dickinson, of Fremont, and Abel Rawson, of Tiffin, and July 12, 1832, was admitted to practice. Learning that Findlay, the then new county seat of Hancock county, had no lawyer, he at once concluded to come here and cast his fortunes with the then hamlet. Traveling on foot from Tiffin, he reached Findlay on the third day of his journey, and went to reside in the home of Dr. Rawson, a practicing physician of the village. This was in August, 1832, and in September he was appointed prosecuting attorney, which position he held until June, 1836. The office of prosecutor, however, paid a very small salary during this period of the county's history, and for several months after settling in Findlay, Mr. Goit patiently waited for clients that never came. Discouraged at the poor outlook, he at last made up his mind to leave the town, but ere carrying out his intention, the tide turned, he was engaged to teach a school, and was thus guaranteed sufficient to pay his board. Clients soon began to consult him, hope took the place of despondency, and he gave up the idea of leaving Findlay. While boarding at the tavern of William Taylor, in 1835, he married Miss Jane Patterson, a sister of Mrs. Taylor, with whom she was living. In May, 1836, Mr. Goit was appointed auditor, vice John C. Shannon, deceased, and served till March, 1837. In April, 1837, he was again appointed prosecuting attorney, but resigned the office in October, 1838. The same month he was elected treasurer, and filled that office two successive terms. He was now on the highway to prosperity, and besides attending to the duties of his profession, launched out boldly into other pursuits. He accumulated a large amount of land and engaged extensively in mercantile business in Hancock, Allen and Putnam counties. He, however, got "too many irons in the fire;" his business was too complex for judicious management, and his large land interests finally became an incumbrance and proved his financial downfall. From January, 1858, to January, 1862, he again filled the office of prosecuting attorney, and this finished his official career. Mr. Goit possessed unbounded energy, and though a fair lawyer, did not devote sufficient attention to his profession to keep up with the times. He was a man of fine personal appearance and dignified carriage, and was regarded as a very strong jury lawyer. Though he lost the fruits of a lifetime of persevering industry, he did not, however, "fail," as that term is commonly understood, but paid his creditors to the last penny, no man losing a cent by him and his every promise being faithfully redeemed. Such was his sterling honesty, that his principal solace at the hour of his death was the fact that he owed no man a dollar. His first wife died in the spring of 1863, leaving a family of three sons and one daughter. One of the sons was subsequently killed in the war of the rebellion. Mr. Goit was afterward married to Mrs. Sarah A. McConnell, of Van Buren, and in the fall of 1867 removed to Bowling Green, where he died May 29, 1880. Two daughters were born of the second marriage, both of whom are dead. No man has ever lived in Findlay who is more kindly remembered than Edson Goit. He was charitable to a fault, and every worthy public enterprise found in him a warm friend and generous supporter. Mr. Goit built while living in Findlay what was then the largest block in Findlay. The Karg Bros.' meat market block is a portion of the building he erected, although the entire structure was remodeled during the boom.

ARNOLD F. MERRIAM.

Arnold F. Merriam was the second lawyer to locate in Findlay. He was born in Brandon, Vermont, December 17, 1811, and was there educated and began the study of law. In early manhood he removed to Zanesville, Ohio, where he completed his law studies and was admitted to practice. He soon afterward started for Vinton county, where he intended to locate, but during his journey met Wilson Vance, who induced him to change his mind and come to Findlay. He arrived here in the spring of 1835, and entered into partnership with Edson Goit. In June, 1836, he was appointed prosecuting attorney, which office he filled till April, 1837, when he resigned. On the 27th of May, 1837, he married Miss Sarah A. Baldwin, sister of Dr. William Baldwin, who bore him one son and two daughters. In January, 1838, Mr. Merriam started the Hancock Republican, the first Whig paper published in the county, which he published about a year. He then removed to Mansfield, Ohio, sold the press and subsequently went to Kentucky, where he died in July, 1844. His widow returned with her family to Findlay, and afterward married Judge Robert Strother. The lady is now living here, the venerable Mrs. S. A. Strother, whom everybody loves and reveres. Though Mr. Merriam followed his profession about four years in this county, he left Findlay at such an early date that little is remembered of him by the older citizens still living.

JOHN H. MORRISON.

John H. Morrison was the third lawyer who came to Findlay, and was one of the best known members of the pioneer bar. P. B. Morrison and the Misses Morrison, of this city, one of whom is now dead, were son and daughters of the once celebrated lawyer. He was born in Uniontown, Pennsylvania, in 1802, but removed when quite young to Perry county, Ohio, where at the age of fifteen he lost his right arm by accident. Young Morrison received a good common school education, read law in the office of Philemon Beccher, of Lancaster, Ohio, began practice in Bucyrus, and afterwards filled the office of prosecuting attorney and treasurer of Crawford county. In the fall of 1836 he located in Findlay, and soon became well known throughout northwestern Ohio. Mr. Morrison was talented, blunt and fearless to a remarkable degree, possessed of untiring energy, and was an indefatigable worker in the interests of his clients. Mr. Morrison was married in Perry county, Ohio, to a Miss Henthorn, who died at Bucyrus, without issue. He afterwards married Miss Nancy Williams, who reared a family of five children, two of whom still reside in this city. He died April 19, 1854, but he is as vividly remembered by the older members of the bar as if he had only passed away a year ago.

JACOB BARND.

Jacob Barnd was a bright promising, young lawyer, who died in 1845. He was a native of Perry county, Ohio, and a son of Christian Barnd, a pioneer of 1831, in which year he removed with his parents to this county. In 1832 the family moved from the farm into Findlay, where Jacob afterward studied law under Edson Goit. He was admitted to the bar in 1837, and in October, 1838, was appointed prosecuting attorney, but served only until the end of the term of court, which was October 9, 1838. He filled the recorder's office two terms, from October, 1838, to October, 1844, and it is probable that he did not practice much during that period. He left two sons at his death.

JUDE HALL.

Jude Hall came to Findlay about 1836, where he followed the carpenter trade, and sometimes preached the gospel. He was a queer specimen of the genus homo and quite an eccentric character. He read law with Edson Goit and soon after admission, in 1838, he was elected prosecuting attorney and re-elected in 1840. In 1843 he removed to Defiance, and thence to Upper Sandusky, where further trace of him was lost in the fading twilight of tradition.

HON. CHARLES W. O'NEAL.

Honorable Charles W. O'Neal comes next in the order of time. He was born in Middletown, Frederick county, Maryland, January 18, 1811, and in 1833 removed to Zanesville, Ohio, where the following year he was married to Miss Amy J. Baldwin. In July, 1835, he came to Findlay and began the study of law in the office of Goit and Merriam and in August, 1838, was admitted to practice. Mr. O'Neal was a practical surveyor and did a great deal of surveying in this county. He was also one of the pioneer school teachers of Findlay.

In 1836 he was elected auditor, serving one term, and he also represented this district in the state senate from 1844 to 1846. He practiced his profession in Hancock county nearly forty years, retiring from active practice a few years prior to his death, and removing to Indiana, whence he returned and died in Findlay, December 20, 1879. Mr. O'Neal, though a safe counsellor, was not an advocate and rarely appeared in that capacity in any important case. He was very methodical and dignified in his practice, terse and forcible in argument, and always courteous to the opposing counsel. He was close and economical in his business habits, and very successful in the accumulation of wealth, leaving to his descendants a handsome fortune.

ABEL F. PARKER.

Abel F. Parker was born in Cavendish, Windsor county, Vermont, May 11, 1800, and died in Findlay May 31, 1881, in his eighty-second year. In early manhood he settled in Genesee county, New York, where he removed with his family to Blanchard township, this county, and two years later located in Findlay. He read law under Edson Goit, and was admitted to the bar in 1842. The same year he was elected prosecuting attorney and served one term. In 1846 he was again elected prosecutor and re-elected in 1848, but resigned the office in 1849. Mr. Parker also filled the office of postmaster of Findlay. His first wife died in 1848, leaving a family of one son and two daughters. In 1852 Mr. Parker married Sarah A. Robinson, who bore him two sons and one daughter. His two daughters, Misses Julia and Dora, still reside in this city, and a son, Judge Robert Parker, resides at Bowling Green.

Though Mr. Parker lived to the ripe old age of more than four score years, he nevertheless continued in practice up to within a short period of his decease.

He loved his profession and was highly respected by his associates of the bar.

EZRA BROWN.

Ezra Brown was born in Lown, Canada, August 4, 1814, and when about three years old removed with his parents to what is now the town of Albion, Orleans county, New York, where he resided till October, 1839, when he came to Findlay. He entered the law office of John H. Morrison and was admitted to practice in July, 1842. He formed a partnership with his preceptor and continued in practice until February, 1847, then removed to a farm in Wood county, near Fostoria. In the spring of 1852, Mr. Brown returned to Findlay and resumed the practice of his profession. He remained in practice till the fall of 1880, and then retired from the active duties thereof. In the spring of 1885 Mr. Brown was elected justice of the peace, which office he held until his death, sometime later. He was mayor of Findlay and a member of the council. On the 11th of November, 1845, he married Miss Jane E. Bigelow, who died February 4, 1873, leaving a family of two daughters, Miss Metta, who is a teacher in the schools in Portland, Oregon, and Mrs. S. P. DeWolf, wife of the ex-county auditor and present manager of the Findlay Morning Republican. A son died at Memphis, Tennessee, in 1863, while serving in the Union army.

ELIJAH WILLIAMS.

Elijah Williams was also a student in the office of Mr. Morrison, and was admitted with Ezra Brown in July, 1842. He practiced in Findlay about eight years, when he removed to Portland, Oregon, where he died a few years ago. He is remembered as a sharp, shrewd but diffident lawyer.

M. C. WHITELEY.

Honorable Machias C. Whiteley was born May 24, 1822, and died several years since. He came of Scotch-Irish parentage and was born at East New Market, Dorchester county, Maryland, on the eastern shore of that state. His paternal grandfather was a patriot of the Revolution, and his father served in the war of 1812 against the British. In 1832 his parents, Willis and Elizabeth Whiteley, removed with their family to Baltimore, Fairfield county, where the subject of this sketch worked on a farm and attended the common schools of the neighborhood. He subsequently learned the harness and saddler trade, which he followed until coming to Findlay in 1840. For two years he worked in the clerk's office, devoting his spare time to reading law with Goit & O'Neal, and then returned to Fairfield county, where he continued his law studies with Medill & Whitman, of Lancaster. On the 4th of July, 1843, he was admitted to the bar at Tiffin, and immediately opened a law office in Findlay, where he gradually attained a lucrative practice. In 1847 Mr. Whiteley was married to Miss Sarah A. Henderson, a native of Wayne county, Ohio, and daughter of William L. Henderson, a leading pioneer surveyor of Hancock county, and one of its earliest settlers. Nine children were born to this union, of which Fred P. Whiteley, of this city, is one of the survivors. In 1848 Mr. Whiteley was elected to the legislature, and re-elected in 1849. While in the legislature he took part in the election of Salmon P. Chase to the United States senate, and secured the charter of the Pittsburg, Ft. Wayne & Chicago railroad. In 1856 he was a delegate to the Democratic national convention, which nominated Buchanan and Breckenridge for president and vice-president of the United States.

The same fall he was elected judge of the court of common pleas for the third subdivision of the Ninth judicial district, and re-elected in 1861, serving on the bench ten years. In 1864 Judge Whiteley was nominated on the Democratic ticket for supreme judge, but with the balance of the ticket was defeated, the state going largely Republican that year. Upon retiring from the bench in 1867, Judge Whiteley resumed practice in Findlay and continued in active practice almost up to the time of his death. He was one of the most prominent attorneys of Northwestern Ohio, and a Democrat of Democrats, but absolutely refused to vote when the registration law went into effect.

WILLIAM M. PATTERSON.

William M. Patterson was admitted to the bar at Tiffin July 4, 1843, on the same day as Mr. Whiteley. He was born in Harrison county, Ohio, March 24, 1812, and in the spring of 1834 came to Findlay with his parents, Major John and Elizabeth Patterson. He read law with Charles W. O'Neal, and upon his admission began practice in Findlay. In 1844 he was elected prosecuting attorney and served one term. He was married in 1834 to Susan Amspoker, and resided in Findlay till 1854, when, with his wife and four children, he removed to Kansas and died in the spring of 1858 from the effects of an accident caused by a boiler explosion in the fall of 1855 in a saw mill which he was then operating.

HON. JAMES M. COFFINBERRY.

Honorable James M. Coffinberry became a member of the Findlay bar in the fall of 1845. He was born in Mansfield, Ohio, May 16, 1818, whence, in 1836, his father, Andrew Coffinberry, removed to Perrysburg, Wood county. Here James M. read law in his father's office, and in 1840 was admitted to the bar. His father, widely known as "Count" Coffinberry, was one of the leading attorneys of Northwestern Ohio, and practiced in this portion of the state throughout the earlier years of its history. Soon after admission to the bar James M. opened a law office in Maumee city, and subsequently served as prosecuting attorney of Lucas county. Late in the fall of 1845 he settled in Findlay, where he purchased an interest and took editorial charge of the Findlay Herald, the local organ of the Whig party. In the spring of 1846 he became sole owner of the Herald, which he published about three years, then sold out to Dr. David Patton. From the date of his coming to Findlay, Judge Coffinberry took and retained a leading position at the Hancock county bar and in 1852 was a prime mover in the establishment of the Findlay bank, the first financial institution established in the county. Feeling the need of a large field for the full exercise of his maturer powers he concluded in 1855 to remove to Cleveland, Ohio, where he held a high rank among the eminent lawyers of that city. In 1861 he was elected on the Union ticket judge of the common pleas court, and served five years on the bench. Upon the expiration of his judicial term, he resumed his professional duties, and continued in the enjoyment of a large and lucrative practice till 1875, when he retired. He was one of the greatest lawyers Findlay ever had.

CHARLES S. COFFINBERRY.

Charles S. Coffinberry, a younger brother of the judge, practiced law in Findlay about three years. He was a native of Mansfield, Ohio, born February 1, 1824; read law with his father at Perrysburg and came to Findlay in the spring of 1846, where he formed a partnership with John H. Morrison. In 1849, in company with others from this portion of Ohio, he went to California, and was afterward appointed by President Fillmore to take the first census of that state. In the discharge of this laborious undertaking he was ably assisted by his father, who had followed him to the new Eldorado. He finally returned to Ohio, and for a few months was associated with his brother in the practice of the law in Cleveland; but failing health compelled him to again relinquish his professional labors, and he went to Oregon and New Mexico, where he spent the latter years of his life dying of consumption about thirty miles south of Pueblo, December 17, 1873.

AARON H. BIGELOW.

Aaron H. Bigelow was a native of Vermont, and a graduate of Middlebury college. He there read law and was admitted to practice. In July, 1841, he located in Findlay, and for a few years was engaged in mercantile pursuits. He then began the practice of law, which he followed until 1856, when he gave up the profession, and subsequently removed to Indiana, where he died. Mr. Bigelow possessed a good education and was a fair speaker, but never acquired much practice.

JOHN E. ROSETTE.

John E. Rosette, first located in Mt. Blanchard, where he was married. In 1848 he removed to Findlay, and in April, 1849, was appointed prosecuting attorney, vice Abel F. Parker, resigned. He was twice elected to the same position, serving until January, 1854. He was a modest, quiet man, of studious habits, possessed good legal judgment but diffident and lacking self-reliance. Soon after the expiration of his last term as prosecutor he removed to Springfield, Illinois, where he rapidly secured recognition as a sound, reliable lawyer. He was appointed by President Johnson United States district attorney for the southern district of Illinois. For some years before his death he enjoyed a wide reputation as a criminal lawyer, and commanded the confidence of a bar embracing many distinguished men.

HENRY BROWN.

Henry Brown was one of the oldest and best known members of the bar. He was born in Albion, Orleans county, New York, November 25, 1826, and received a good literary and classical education at the Albion academy. In May, 1844, he came to Ohio and engaged in school teaching near Fostoria, which vocation he followed three years. During this period he commenced the study of law under Honorable Warren P. Noble, of Tiffin, and in the fall of 1848 was admitted to practice. In January, 1842, he located in Findlay as a member of the law firm of Goit, Bigelow & Brown. In January, 1851, Mr. Brown became one of the editors and proprietors of the Hancock Courier, which he continued to publish until January, 1854, when he sold his interest to his partner, Aaron Blackford, who had also been his law partner for the last two years. In January, 1855, he assumed entire editorial control of the Courier, and carried on that paper until December 20, 1856. He was elected auditor in October, 1854, and served till March, 1857. Mr. Brown was then compelled by ill health to retire from active business. After a period of needed recuperation he resumed the practice of his profession, and in November, 1862, was appointed prosecuting attorney to serve the unexpired term of James A. Bope, resigned; was elected as his own successor, and re-elected to the same position. In 1868 he was the Democratic senatorial candidate for election in this district, and made a splendid race, reducing the previous Republican majority 1,973 votes, being defeated by only 227. Mr. Brown was again elected prosecutor in 1875, and re-elected in 1877. In 1884 he was once more chosen to fill the same office, and in 1887 was elected to the lower house of the legislature, succeeding himself in 1889. He died May 11, 1893, regretted by all who knew him.

WILLIAM GRIBBEN.

William Gribben was one of the brightest and brainiest members of the Findlay bar and might have risen very high if he had devoted his talents to his profession. He was born in Allegheny county, Pennsylvania, March 11, 1825, and the following autumn his parents removed to what is now Ashland county, Ohio, where Mr. Gribben grew to maturity and received a common school education. He read law with Johnson and Sloan of Ashland and was admitted to the bar in the fall of 1850. The same autumn he located in Findlay and formed a partnership with John H. Morrison, and subsequently with Judge Whiteley. In 1853 he was elected prosecuting attorney and re-elected in 1855. He served in the legislature from 1862 to 1864, and received the certificate of re-election, but lost the seat on contest. This was during the most exciting period in the political history of the state, when Democrats were publicly branded as rebels, and political passion ran high. Mr. Gribben followed his profession until his death, which occurred November 28, 1887.

AARON BLACKFORD.

Aaron Blackford is one of the oldest and most prominent members of the Hancock county bar, to which he has belonged nearly fifty years. He was born in Columbiana county, Ohio, February 8, 1827, and removed to Findlay with his parents, Price and Abigail Blackford, in October, 1834. He received his education in the public schools of Findlay and at Delaware college, Delaware, Ohio. He read law with Henry Brown, of Findlay, attended the Cincinnati law school, and was admitted to the bar in May, 1852. In January, 1851, he became associated with Henry Brown, in the publication of the Hancock Courier, which they jointly edited until January, 1854, when Mr. Blackford became sole editor. He conducted the paper about one year, and then disposed of his interest to his former partner. During this period Mr. Blackford also practiced law, and with the passing years, has attained more than a state prominence in his profession. Mr. Blackford is the Nestor of the Findlay bar and has accumulated great wealth, but works as hard as ever. He has four sons, two of whom are now practicing attorneys in this city—Rollin dying a few years ago, the two still practicing here being Frank P. and Charles A. Blackford.

WILLIAM MUNGEN.

Honorable William Mungen was a native of Baltimore, Maryland, born May 12, 1821, and died September 9, 1887. He removed with his family to Carroll county, Ohio, in 1830, where he received a common school education, and subsequently studied Latin, German and the physical sciences. He came to Findlay in October, 1842; in February, 1845, he took possession of the old Hancock Farmer and changed the name to the Hancock Democrat, and on the first of July, 1845, became the editor and proprietor of the Hancock Courier, consolidating the two papers. Excepting one year that the office was rented to William M. Case, and a short period to B. F. Rosenberg, Mr. Mungen published the Courier until January, 1851, when he sold the establishment to Henry Brown and Aaron Blackford, two leading members of the bar. In 1846 Mr. Mungen was elected auditor of Hancock county and re elected in 1848. In 1851 he was chosen to represent this district in the state senate, and declined a renomination, which was then equal to election. In the meantime he had been reading law during his spare moments, and in 1852 was admitted to the bar and began practice. When the Rebellion broke out in 1861, Mr. Mungen was foremost in recruiting the Fifty-seventh Ohio volunteer infantry, and was commissioned colonel of that gallant regiment, which he commanded until April, 1863, when he resigned his commission. Colonel Mungen served as a Democrat two terms in congress from 1867 to 1871. He is the only congressman Hancock county ever had. Mrs. Jacob H. Boger and Miss Effie Mungen, of this city, are his daughters. Mr. Mungen was a true patriot, a noble citizen, a great lawyer and a brave soldier, serving in any capacity in which his country's cause was the prime motive.

William Mungen.

ANDREW "COUNT" COFFINBERRY.

Andrew Coffinberry was conspicuous among the old-time lawyers of the Maumee Valley, and though not a resident of Findlay until a few years prior to his death, he practiced at this bar before the county possessed a single attorney. He was born at Martinsburg, Berkeley county, Virginia, August 20, 1788. In the spring of 1836 he removed with his family to Perrysburg, Wood county, where he resided until 1849-50. From Perrysburg he removed to Sidney, Snelby county; there he left his family and went to California. Upon the death of his wife, which occurred during his absence, his son, James M., brought the family to Findlay, where their father joined them on his return from California. Here he continued in practice until his death, May 11, 1856. Count Coffinberry was not only a lawyer of ability, but possessed considerable literary talent, and gave some attention to the muses. "The Forest Rangers," a descriptive poem, was one of his productions. His sobriquet of Count was first playfully given him by his professional associates from some real or supposed resemblance to the illustrious German jurist and publicist, Count Puffendorf. The title was recognized as being so appropriate to the man that it stuck to him through life, and thousands of those who knew him long and well never learned that it was not his real name.

JOHN F. CAPLES.

John F. Caples came to Findlay from Fostoria in the fall of 1854, and practiced law here till the spring of 1858, when he removed to Warsaw, Indiana. He subsequently went to Portland, Oregon, and entered into the practice of his profession. "John F. Caples," said Judge Coffinberry, "is one of the best lawyers of his adopted state." During his life in Findlay he was recognized as a good speaker and a promising young lawyer.

DANIEL B. BEARDSLEY.

Daniel B. Beardsley, one of the pioneers of Hancock county, and a lawyer for many years in Findlay, was born in Licking county, Ohio, May 12, 1832, and was brought by his parents to Hancock county in 1834, where he resided until his death, September 29, 1894. Mr. Beardsley was educated in the public schools of this county and taught school for a number of years. He read law with Walker & West, of Bellefontaine, and was there admitted to the bar in

Wm. Taylor & Co. 55

Jacob F. Burkett.

August, 1856. In March, 1857, he located in practice in Findlay, and for thirty-seven years was a member of the local bar. In 1858 he was elected a justice of the peace of Findlay township, and re-elected eight times, serving continuously from the spring of 1858 to the spring of 1885, a period of twenty-seven years. Mr. Beardsley was prominent in the organization of "The Hancock County Pioneer and Historical Association," and an active member during its existence. His connection with this society prompted him to write a history of Hancock county, which he published in 1881. Mr. Beardsley was also secretary of the Hancock County Agricultural Society for many years, and he was a good one—an untiring worker and a genial, courteous gentleman, with friends in every nook and corner of the county.

WILLIAM C. BUNTS.

William C. Bunts located in Findlay in the spring of 1858, whither he removed from Youngstown, Ohio. He graduated in 1854 from Allegheny college at Meadville, Pennsylvania, read law with Ridgeley Powers, of Youngstown, and upon admission began practice with his preceptor. Mr. Bunts practiced law in Findlay till 1860, and then returned to Youngstown and resumed partnership with Mr. Powers. He afterwards served in the Civil War, on the staff of General Rosecrans; located at Nashville, Tennessee; returned to Youngstown; thence to Cleveland, where he filled the position of assistant United States district attorney and city solicitor, dying January 16, 1874, while holding the latter office.

HON. JOHN M. PALMER.

Honorable John M. Palmer was born in Clinton county, New York, July 5, 1814, learned the cabinet makers' trade in Portland, Vermont, and worked at his trade in that state. In 1837 he came to Ohio and attended Granville Seminary. He studied law with Honorable Henry Strausberry, of Cincinnati, and was there admitted to practice in 1841. In 1843 he was married at Lancaster, Ohio, to Miss Ellen Weaver and located in practice at Somerset, Perry county. In 1846 he removed to Defiance, where he followed his profession until 1852, when he was elected judge of the court of common pleas. While still on the bench Judge Palmer removed to Putnam county, in which county he had considerable land interests, and a township of which was named in his honor. In June, 1858, he settled in Findlay and resumed the practice of law in partnership with John Maston. From 1861 to 1863 he was a commissary in the army, with the rank of captain, but, resigning the office, remained in the south for some time. Returning to Findlay he again took up his practice and followed the profession up to the illness which resulted in his death, November 29, 1876.

COLONEL JAMES A. BOPE.

Colonel James A. Bope is a native of Adams county, Ohio, born November 30, 1833. His parents removed to Fairfield county, where Mr. Bope grew to maturity and received the advantages of a public school education. He graduated from Wittenberg college, Springfield, Ohio, in 1855, and soon afterward entered the law office of Hunter & Dougherty, at Lancaster, Ohio. In the fall of 1857 he was admitted to practice and the following year opened an office at Lancaster. Colonel Bope came to Findlay in the fall of 1859, where he has ever since practiced his profession. In October, 1861, he was elected on the Democratic ticket prosecuting attorney of Hancock county, but he entered the army as captain of company D, Ninety-ninth Ohio volunteer infantry, in July, 1862, and resigned the office of prosecutor the following October. He served until the close of the war and came out with the rank of lieutenant-colonel. Resuming practice in Findlay, he soon became recognized as one of the most prominent attorneys of the bar. In November, 1887, Mr. Bope was appointed to fill vacancy in the office of prosecuting attorney, Henry Brown, resigned, and also filled one term to 1891 as prosecuting attorney, he being elected to that position, this time as a Republican. Colonel Bope is a careful, conscientious, scholarly lawyer, who believes in the dignity of his profession, and is one of the most popular members of the legal fraternity.

JACOB F. BURKET.

Jacob F. Burket, chief justice of Ohio, was born March 25, 1837, near Somerset, Perry county, Ohio, son of Solomon Burket, who was of Swiss descent. One of his ancestors, who came from Switzerland and settled near Lancaster, Pennsylvania, had two sons, John and Jacob Burket, who were the progenitors of the Burket family in this country.

The grandfather of our subject, John Burket, who served in the Revolutionary war, in Von Hees' cavalry, and served as a body guard to Washington, emigrated from Pennsylvania to Ohio and lived to the advanced age of ninety-six years. Mr. Burket's mother, Mary (Brehm) Burket, whose father was also in the Revolutionary war and emigrated from Pennsylvania to this state, was of German extraction. In September, 1839, the Burket family moved from Perry county to Hancock county, settling in Union township.

Mr. Burket went to the log school-house and had at the same time to do work on the farm. When he was ten years of age his father died, leaving a widow with nine children, of whom Jacob F. is the youngest son. When he reached the age of seventeen he removed to Findlay and was apprenticed to his brother-in-law, Jacob Falk, for the purpose of learning the carpenters' trade. After working for him thirteen months his brother-in-law's health failed, whereupon, by mutual agreement, the indentures were cancelled. June 4, 1855, he began teaching at Lewisville, Blanchard township. Having taught for three years he attended a very excellent select school at Vanlue, in Hancock county, the proprietor being Mr. William K. Leonard; completing his term he returned to his trade (carpenter) for a time, engaging in mechanical labor in the summer and teaching school in the winter and attending school in the fall and spring. In 1859 he entered an academy at Republic, Seneca county, Ohio. At this school Mr. Burket received a thorough training in logic which afterwards was of great advantage in his profession. June 29, 1859, he commenced reading law with Judge Palmer, and having remained with him a little more than a year, he entered the office of Goit and Brown, in the meanwhile teaching school every winter. July 1, 1861, he was admitted to the bar, when he commenced the practice of his profession at Ottawa, Putnam county, Ohio, where he remained until April, 1862. On the 16th of that month he opened an office in Findlay, and September 7 of that year, entered into partnership with Henry Brown under the firm name of Brown & Burket, which was dissolved May 1, 1869, since which time Mr. Burket has been alone in his practice, up to the time he and his son, Harlan F., formed a partnership, January 1, 1888. Mr. Burket assisted in organizing the American National Bank in 1887, and holds the office of president of that institution. In politics he is a Republican; he was one of the electors in the presidential contest of 1880, and still has in his possession the ticket by him voted for James A. Garfield and Chester A. Arthur in the electoral college held in the senate chamber at Columbus, Ohio. In the fall of 1892 Mr. Burket was elected to the office of supreme judge of Ohio, and re-elected in 1898, he now holding the office of chief justice of the state of Ohio.

ELIJAH T. DUNN.

Elijah T. Dunn was born in Knox county, Ohio, June 20, 1840. His father was a farmer and tobacco grower. In 1844 he removed with his people to Wood county, Ohio, in what was then known as the "Black Swamp," where around a hickory bark fire, and three terms of winter school, his early education was finished. At the age of thirteen he entered the office of the Herald of Freedom, at Wilmington, and became an expert printer. He taught several terms of school in Clarke and Hancock counties, pursuing in the meantime the study of law. On the breaking out of the Rebellion he united with the Union party, while yet a minor, and did service for a short time as a member of the Twenty-first regiment, Ohio volunteers. Becoming unable to perform duty as a soldier, he continued for a while in a clerkship in the quartermaster's department at Nashville, Tennessee. Returning to Findlay, he completed his law course, and on the 2d of August, 1862, was admitted to the bar. He was then twenty-two years of age. He then settled down in Findlay, and has ever since been creditably identified with the legal profession.

GEORGE F. PENDLETON.

Honorable George F. Pendleton, at present one of the leading attorneys of Findlay, Ohio, was born in Waldo, now Knox county, Maine, September 27, 1840, and the following year was brought by his parents to Hancock county, where he has ever since resided. Mr. Pendleton passed his boyhood days upon the farm, receiving his education principally in the common schools of Putnam and Hancock counties. At the age of fifteen he began work for himself by teaching school. He taught in the winter and worked on the farm in the summer until August, 1862, when he closed his school at Union Center and responded to the call of his country for assistance in preserving the Union. August 19, 1862, he enlisted in company G, One Hundred and Eighteenth regiment, Ohio volunteer infantry, of which his father, Darius Pendleton, was first lieutenant, and his brother John a private. After a year's service as private in this company our subject was advanced to the position of corporal, in which he served in the company and on detached service until he was mustered out on June 5, 1865, at Columbus, Ohio. After remaining with his company for the first fifteen months, Mr. Pendleton was detailed to act as chief clerk of the brigade commissary, and shortly afterward was advanced to the position of chief clerk of the post commissary, with headquarters at Kingston, Tennessee. After the war he returned to Nashville, Tennessee, where he assisted in closing the military accounts of different officers. In August, 1865, his health compelled him to resign, and he returned to his home in Hancock county, where he resumed his work of teaching. In 1867 he was appointed chief deputy in the office of C. B. Wilson, internal revenue collector for the Seventh district of Ohio, with headquarters at Findlay, and in this office he passed the two following years. He then entered the office of Brown and Anderson in Findlay and began the study of law, and after doing the requisite amount of reading, passed the examination and was admitted by the supreme court of Ohio to the bar, at the December term, in 1870. He formed a partnership with W. H. Anderson, which continued as the firm of Anderson & Pendleton, with a year's intermission, until 1876. At that time the partnership was dissolved, and our subject connected himself with Honorable Henry Brown, the senior member of the firm, who had been his preceptor. This partnership continued for two years, after which time Mr. Pendleton practiced alone until 1883. He had taken a very active interest in the campaigns of the party, and as a recognition of his services he was elected common pleas judge for the Tenth district in October, 1883. In this office he served for a period of seven years, during which he established a reputation for the correct administration of justice, which but few have equaled. He again resumed the practice of law, in which he has been continuously engaged since that date. Mr. Pendleton has filled a number of public positions, all of which he has filled with credit to himself and satisfaction to his constituents. In 1867 he was appointed county school examiner, in which position he served for a period of seven years, at the same time acting as examiner for the city schools of Findlay. From April, 1870, to April, 1872, he officiated as mayor of Findlay, and from January 1, 1872, to January 1, 1876, he was prosecuting attorney of Hancock county.

But enough; were I to undertake a biography of all the legal lights of which Findlay is possessed, I could write an entire volume on this subject alone; but suffice to say the attorneys of this county are all well qualified to enter into the most intricate cases and do justice thereby.

HANCOCK COUNTY BAR ASSOCIATION.

Pursuant to a call which was circulated among the attorneys of Findlay, upwards of thirty members of the legal fraternity met at 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon, March 11, 1899, in the circuit court room. On motion Mr. Aaron Blackford was chosen chairman and Silas E. Hurin secretary.

Mr. E. T. Dunn offered a motion to the effect that it was the sense of those present that a bar association should be formed. After remarks by several of the attorneys, Mr. Dunn's motion was adopted.

Mr. George W. Ross then moved that the chair appoint a committee of five to formulate a constitution and by-laws. This carried, and Messrs. George W. Ross, J. A. Bope, E. T. Dunn, Jason Blackford and Harlan F. Burket were named as that committee

The association held meetings from time to time, adopted a constitution and by-laws, and at the present time, under the able officers, Aaron Blackford president, and Silas E. Hurin secretary, bid fair to equal any association of its kind, in the matter of qualifications, clear-mindedness and capability, that can be produced any where in this state.

The constitution has been signed by the following named attorneys: A. Blackford, J. A. Bope, E. T. Dunn, Jason Blackford, George W. Ross, W. H. Kinder, John N. Doty, A. G. Fuller, S. E. Hurin, N. W. Bright, T. H. McConica, A. E. Kerns, M. C. Shafer, R. A. Blackford (deceased), Chas. A. Blackford, John E. Todd (Columbus) H. F. Burket, W. F. Duncan, F. P. Blackford, J. W. Grimm, John E. Betts, W. W. Chapman, E. V. Bope, C. B. Dwiggins, W. L. David, J. Frank Axline, G. G. Banker, Reed Metzler, George F. Pendleton, J. J. Cole, George H. Phelps, Theodore Totten, B. L. Dunn, W. V. Coons, H. Walter Doty, A. P. Byal, W. H. McElwaine (removed). This, however, represents only a portion of our legal talent in this city and county, and below I endeavor to give the names of those, some of whom have become members of the bar association, but failed to sign the constitution, and others who as yet have not connected their name with said association: O. A. Ballard, C. V. Bish, J. C. Bitler, Chas. O. Burket, R. Clint Cole, Honorable Ralph D. Cole, R. K. Carlin, D. H. S. Davis, John E. Priddy, Marion G. Foster, Franklin Franks, J. W. Franks, Alfred Graber, John M. Hamlin, J. M. Harrison, L. Howard Jones, Charles E. Jordan, Samuel A. Kagy, R. J. Kibler, R. C. Lovering, Thomas Meehan, Robert Morris, E. L. E. Mumma, J. M. Platt, John Poe, Merle N. Poe, John F. Rankin, John Sheridan, J. D. Snyder, Beecher W. Waltermire, Ross J. Wetherald, F. P. Whiteley, Willis H. Whiteley, William F. Yost and Albert Zugschwert, all of Findlay; W. F. Brickman and W. E. Cooper of McComb, Jacob Line and Jacob Slike of Mt. Blanchard, and W. S. Snook of Vanlue—74 in number. Surely from this outlay of legal talent, no one in Hancock county ought to go forward into the dark caverns of unlighted knowledge, especially from lack of persons able to throw legal light upon almost any subject which the human mind might possess.

El Dorado County Bar Association.

CHAPTER XII.

THE NEWSPAPERS.

The first issue of the paper now called the Hancock Courier was given to the few citizens of the small hamlet of Findlay on the 10th of November, 1836. There are few persons who were here then that are yet living. The Courier is older than the city, as Findlay was not incorporated until two years later. It was the first newspaper in Northwestern Ohio, and for a time it had a precarious existence. At that time it was an 18x26 inch sheet. There were no steam presses, and the pressman had to pull the "Devil's tail" for every impression. The nearest paper mill was at Delaware, and mud wagon over muddy roads the only means of getting the paper to Findlay. There were no railroads—it might be said there were no roads at all. Matters and times have changed materially. News which then required four weeks to come from Washington and six to eight weeks from Europe, now reaches us with the swiftness of the lightning's flash.

The paper was first called The Findlay Courier, but at the beginning of the second volume the name was increased to The Findlay Courier and Hancock and Putnam Democratic Shield. In 1851 the name was changed to The Hancock Courier, and this name has been retained ever since, except that the superfluous "The" was dropped in 1862.

The Findlay Courier was established November 10, 1836, by Jacob Rosenberg, and edited and published by him until January 17, 1839.

Mr. Rosenberg was born in Bedford, Bedford county, Pennsylvania, October 13, 1811. He came to Findlay on the 29th of September, 1836, and started the paper shortly after, as stated above.

On the 24th of January, 1839, Mr. Henry Bishop purchased the Courier and edited and published the Courier until July 1, 1845.

Mr. Bishop was born and raised in Franklin county, Ohio. In 1851 he was elected to the Ohio legislature and filled the office with ability for two terms. After selling out the office in 1845 he removed to his farm in Eagle township. He was drowned in Eagle creek June, 1855.

On July 1, 1845, Mr. William Mungen purchased the Courier and conducted it until in November, 1849. We have given an account of Mr. Mungen in the chapter of the Bar of Hancock County.

In November, 1849, William M. Case rented the office for one year. He was an easy-going, careless, worthless fellow, and never appeared to care whether or not the paper came out on time. During this year Mr. Mungen did most of the editorial work. At the close of Mr. Case's lease the office was rented to Mr. B. F. Rosenberg for a short time. In the spring of 1851 Mr. Henry Brown purchased a half interest in the Courier, an account of whom we have given in the chapter of the Bar of Hancock County.

Some time in the spring of 1851 Mr. Aaron Blackford purchased the interest of Mr. Mungen in the Courier and continued in partnership with Mr. Brown until the close of 1856. We have given the biography of Mr. Blackford in the chapter of the bar.

In January, 1857, Mr. Benjamin F. Rosenberg purchased the Courier and conducted it for six months. Mr. Rosenberg was the son of the founder of this paper.

On the 25th of July, 1857, the Courier passed into the hands of Mr. A. M. Hollabaugh, who published and edited the paper until March 1, 1861.

On the 8th of March, 1861, Messrs. L. Glessner and son assumed the charge of editing and publishing the Courier and continued until January 1, 1865.

On the 1st of January, 1865, Mr. William L. Glessner assumed control of the Courier and edited and published the same until May 1, 1866.

Mr. Lewis Glessner assumed charge of the Courier from May 1, 1866, until his death, which occurred March 13, 1879, from which time Fred H. Glessner assumed control and served as general manager and editor until February 23, 1899, when J. L. Patterson, T. A. Dean and others formed a stock company and purchased and assumed control of the Courier, under whose management the paper rapidly progressed. October 20, 1902, Mr. Patterson released his holdings to other parties, and the paper immediately passed under the management of T. A. Dean, who at present has charge of the paper that dates back to the days when Hancock county was just emerging from its primitive condition, and Findlay was a straggling hamlet of cabins; the paper which has published the obituaries of several opposition papers during the period of sixty-seven years; the paper that has ever battled for Democracy and the rights and liberties of the people.

The Hancock Republican was established by Arnold F. Merriam in January, 1838, and was the first Whig paper published in the county. This paper was published about one year and, probably, owing to lack of patronage, died a natural death in its infancy.

The Hancock Farmer was started by Jacob Rosenberg in 1842, as a Democratic paper in favor of nominating candidates by the delegate system instead of by popular vote, the latter system being advocated by Mr. Bishop of the Courier. The Farmer was published by Mr. Rosenberg until his death in October, 1844, and afterward by the administrator, Jacob Barnd. Early in 1845 William Mungen took possession of the office, and issued his first number February 19 of that year.

Toward the close of June Mr. Mungen purchased the Courier and consolidated the papers as the Democratic Courier:

The Western Herald was the second Whig paper started in Findlay. It was established by John T. Ford in January, 1845, in the second story of the old frame building on the corner of Main and Sandusky streets. October 5, 1845, Mr. James M. Coffinberry obtained a half interest in the paper, and the same was issued under the control of both Mr. Ford and Mr. Coffinberry, until January, 1846, when Mr. Coffinberry assumed full control and edited and published the paper as The Findlay Herald until January, 1848, when he sold the office to Dr. David Patton and the paper soon after was suspended.

In September, 1848, Robert Coulter came to Findlay, purchased the Herald office and began the publication of a six-column folio paper called The Hancock Whig. He conducted the Whig until February, 1850, when he sold out to William P. Resznor, who published the paper about seven months, then disposed of it to George G. Lyon in September, 1850. Mr. Lyon was a man of great energy and with the hope of benefiting the paper, changed its name to The Hancock Journal. In July, 1851, Mr. Coulter, who on selling out to Mr. Resznor, had removed to Springfield, Ohio, returned to Findlay, and again became editor and publisher of the paper. Mr. Coulter published the paper until July, 1852, when the Journal suspended publication.

The Home Companion was established by Samuel A. Spear, and its first number issued June 8, 1854. It was a seven column folio, printed on a sheet 25x27 inches in size. The paper started as non-political, and more on the order of reform in the liquor law, the advancement of education by the elevation and improvement of the public schools. In the spring of 1856 Mr. Hugh L. McKee obtained an interest in the paper, and was one of its principal pushers until April 24, 1857, when Mr. Spear became entire owner. On June 19, 1857, the name of the paper was changed to The Hancock Jeffersonian, and remained under the control of Mr. Spear until November 22, 1861, when it suspended business. After a few weeks Mr. D. R. Locke, of Bucyrus, Ohio, came to Findlay and resuscitated the Jeffersonian. Under the new management the paper rapidly increased, owing to the publication of the "Nasby Papers," which won for Mr. Locke a national reputation, and the title of Petroleum V. Nasby. In September, 1864, Irvin S. Chamberlin purchased an interest in the Jeffersonian, and in February, 1865, Mr. Locke sold his remaining interest to Otis T. Locke. In April the name of C. N. Locke appears in the editorial heading. On November 17, 1865, Mr. Chamberlin and C. N. Locke retired and Messrs. L. G. Thrall and Otis T. Locke became sole proprietors. In July, 1866, Mr. Thrall disposed of his interest to his partner, and C. N. Locke again became one of the editors. W. G. Blymyer bought an interest in the Jeffersonian in December, 1866, and the firm was then Locke & Blymyer. In February, 1868, C. N. Locke again purchased an interest, and Locke & Blymyer were editors and proprietors until September 4, 1868, when E. G. DeWolfe and Dr. A. P. Miller purchased the office. On April 1, 1870, the paper came out in a ten-column folio as The Findlay Jeffersonian. In January, 1873, O. J. DeWolfe, a brother of E. G. DeWolfe, bought Dr. Miller's interest, and the paper continued under the management of DeWolfe Bros. until March, 1876, when E. G. DeWolfe became sole owner. E. G. DeWolfe continued to edit and publish the Jeffersonian until April 28, 1876, when he sold it to his old partner, Dr. A. P. Miller, who, before issuing a single number, sold the office to A. H. Balsley, who published the first number under the new management May 5, 1876, and continued at the helm of this paper until January 6, 1902, when Mr. John M. Hoffa, of Bowling Green, purchased the office, and under the new management the paper is becoming one of the largest in circulation. On June 5, 1881, this paper was changed to the Findlay Weekly Jeffersonian, because the daily, which was started November 15, 1880, was called the Findlay Daily Jeffersonian.

The Reporter, a journalistic enterprise, was started June 18, 1872, by C. G. and J. K. Barnd, and originally was a literary paper. In October, 1872, J. K. Barnd sold his interest to C. G. Barnd and the paper attained a very respectable circulation, until early in its second year, it drifted into the grange movement, hoping to become a great organ among the farming community. But the change proved a mistake and the paper's patronage began decreasing. The name was finally changed to the American Patron, and when the grange movement cooled off it became the Property Journal. It was published about five years and then ceased to exist.

Das Ohio Volksblatt, a German Democratic weekly paper, was started in 1877 by Adolph G. Zwanzig. After publishing the paper about one year he removed the office to Lima, where it was subsequently sold by his creditors.

The Findlay Weekly Republican was established by J. M. Beelman and James E. Griswold, and the first number issued February 6, 1879. It was started in opposition to the Jeffersonian, many Republicans not regarding that paper as sufficiently "stalwart" to satisfy their ideas of a party organ. In July, 1879, Mr. Griswold sold his interest to his partner, who enlarged the paper to an eight-column folio. On the 3d of January, 1881, E. G. DeWolfe, then postmaster of Findlay, and Jason Blackford, a member of the Findlay bar, purchased an interest in the Republican. The following October, Mr. Blackford sold out to Mr. DeWolfe, and the paper was subsequently enlarged to a nine-column folio. Capt. H. H. Alban bought Mr. Beelman's interest July 28, 1882, and the firm of DeWolfe & Alban edited and published the paper until the death of Mr. DeWolfe, which occurred August 8, 1888, when H. P. Crouse became editor and S. P. DeWolfe business manager. On April 1, 1900, Mr. Crouse sold his interest to Jesse Huber and I. N. Heminger, and Mr. Huber became editor. On December 7, 1901, Mr. DeWolfe purchased more stock in the paper, and became editor, while Mr. I. N. Heminger became business manager, which offices are at the present time thus filled. Mr. Alban about 1890 sold his interest to other stockholders and thus severed his connection with the paper. At present The Republican publishes a semi-weekly and a morning daily paper, with quite an extensive circulation of both.

The Findlay Daily Star was established by W. S. Hammaker, and first issued August 21, 1882. It was a live, progressive little daily, thoroughly Democratic in politics, and during its career of less than two years was a welcome friend in 550 homes and business places. On April 21, 1884, Mr. A. H. Balsley, of the Jeffersonian, purchased the Star, and consolidated it with the business of that office.

The Findlay Wochenblatt, a German newspaper, was established October 28, 1886, by A. Weixelbaum, who was a very genial and well-educated gentleman, and well fitted for the duty which he undertook. The paper grew rapidly in the field of circulation, and on April 1, 1888, Mr. Christian Heyn purchased the Wochenblatt, which he still edits and publishes, with credit to himself, and to the subscribers, who, without doubt, obtain their money's worth in the way of a first-class German paper. The present owner, Mr. Heyn, is among the industrious, thriving, and energetic business men of our city and county, is very pleasant to meet in conversation of a social or business character, and highly esteemed by all who know him.

The Findlay Union was established in November, 1890, by H. Wilts Brown and Rufus M. Horn, and was published under this firm name until March, 1892, when, on account of ill health, Mr. Horn sold his interest to Mr. Brown, who has ever since sent out his voluminous sheet to the patrons all over this county, who see in his columns some of the wit and humor, as well as the common sense articles, which he, no doubt, inherited from his father, Hon. Henry Brown, an old pioneer newspaper man, and prominent citizen of the county. The Union is a weekly paper, which bids fair to rank among the leading papers of the county in the face of its primitive birth. August 1, 1903, The Courier Company purchased and consolidated The Union with The Hancock Courier, Mr. Brown, former publisher of the Union becoming editor of The Courier.

We have other papers in this county, which the writer does not care to ignore, but of which he cannot give a history. The McComb Record, started July 4, 1894, by E. L. Sutton, and L. G. Herbert, and a few months later sold to the H. H. Moore Printing Co., which now publishes the paper, and gives some very glowing articles, which shows that Mr. Moore is not afraid to express his sentiments in words that the ordinary person can understand.

The McComb Herald was established January 1, 1880, by J. F. Hickerson and others, and soon after purchased by S. B. Davis, of Dunkirk, who published the paper a short time, and then sold to R. M. Horn, who held control for a few years, when he sold out to H. M. Pomeroy, who has conducted the Herald with credit to himself and his patrons. Mr. Pomeroy, in 1902, sold his paper to Daniel Dyer, who is the present publisher. Mr. Pomeroy was proof-reader on the Toledo Times for the past year, but severing his connection with that paper a few months ago, he accepted a similar position with the Toledo Blade.

Mt. Blanchard has a very neat and newsy paper, published by Norman B. Clark, who is surely a newspaper man from the upper ranks.

Arlington can boast of a paper second to none in towns of its size. This paper is published by Mr. L. E. Huston, a very able writer.

There were other papers in various localities of this county, some are still living, others have passed into oblivion. But whatever their length of life was or may be, the newspapers are one of the best educational mediums we today possess. The farmer; the laborer; the merchant; the mechanic; the professional man; the business men in all stages of physical, mental or moral duties. have each an equal opportunity to instill in their minds the current history as it swiftly glides across the stage of time.

CHAPTER XIII.

THE GAS AND OIL INDUSTRY.

The one prevailing and never-to-be-forgotten industry, which caused such excitement the country over, and increased our little village of four thousand inhabitants to a city of eighteen thousand population as if a magic wand had been passed over our heads and the words "hocus pocus" had been pronounced with great emphasis, was the supposed everlasting natural gas.

To give a history of this phenomenal fuel we must take the reader back to the autumn of 1836. Mr. Richard Wade, who entered the west half of the south-east quarter of section six in Jackson township, this county, April 7, 1836, while digging a well on his farm, and having reached the depth of ten feet found plenty of water, but the well was abandoned on account of such a strong flow of gas as to render it unfit for use. Mr. Wade conveyed the gas through a wooden box to the end of which he attached a piece of iron tubing, and he would light it in order to exhibit the phenomenon to visitors.

In the autumn of 1838 Daniel Foster put down a well on the lot now owned by J. M. Curtis, being lot number 171 and situated just north of the present Donnell block. At the depth of eight feet he struck a very strong vein of gas and had to suspend operations. Covering it over he placed a pump tube, extending under his house from an opening in the well to a point near the chimney, and then boring a hole through the floor attached a musket barrel to the pump tube, through which the gas was conducted to near the mouth of the open fire place. This was the first that natural gas was utilized in the county. There were other places in this vicinity where gas was found in wells dug for water supply, but our space being limited we will proceed to more exciting events.

As early as 1850 Dr. Charles Oesterlin became earnestly convinced and argued that underlying the village was a great natural gas deposit which could be developed by drilling through the supervening rock strata, but the people only laughed and intimated that he was crazy. Dr. Oesterlin, however, continued to advocate his belief, until it developed into an absolute fact. While serving in the state legislature Mr. Oesterlin called on the state geologists and informed them that in his opinion their survey of northwestern Ohio was not exactly complete, and that a mighty bed of natural gas lay undeveloped in the vicinity of Findlay. The geologists learnedly replied that whatever natural gas existed at Findlay came from Michigan underneath the bed of Lake Erie, and there was not sufficient gas to pay for sinking wells. The doctor bluntly told them they were all mistaken, and time would prove the correctness of his statement. Dr. Oesterlin was right, and the geologists were wrong.

Early in 1884 Dr. Oesterlin determined to make an effort to organize a company to prospect for natural gas, and approached a number of the citizens and business men with his proposition. The result was that April 18, 1884, articles of incorporation under the name of "The Findlay Natural Gas company," were drawn up, signed and acknowledged by Dr. Charles Oesterlin, Charles J. Eckels, Fred H. Glessner, Henry Porch, George W. Kimmel and Peter Kunz in the presence of Jason Blackford and Vincent H. Coons and three days afterwards filed in the office of the secretary of state. The capital stock was $5,000 divided into 100 shares of $50 each. On the 30th of April the eight citizens of Findlay previously named, together with U. K. Stringfellow and John H. Decker, entered into a private agreement, "to prospect for natural gas, petroleum, coal, minerals and artesian wells (all of which the charter covered), in and about the village of Findlay, Ohio," and share all profits arising therefrom.

The subscription book for stock opened July 19, and on the 25th Dr. Charles Oesterlin took fifteen shares; Charles J. Eckels, ten; Fred H. Glessner, five; George W. Kimmel, five; U. K. Stringfellow, five; Jason Blackford, two, and Henry Porch, two. Subsequently the following named persons took stock in the enterprise: A. C. Heck, John Ruthrauff, J. W. Zeller, W. H. Haven, W. T. Platt, Edward Dietsch, W. B. Porch, Ernest Bacher, William Edwards, J. W. Gassman, Lemuel McManness, G. L. Cusac, Dr. Anson Hurd, John M. Hamlin, Frank Karst, Sr., Isaac Hershey, Brownier & Martin, Mrs. Harriet Detwiler, Mrs. E. H. Young and B. F. Bolton, some of whom, however, took very little interest in the progress of the work.

August 22, 1884, Dr. Charles Osterlin, Charles J. Eckels, Henry Porch, Vincent H. Coons George W. Kimmel, A. C. Heck and U. K. Stringfellow were chosen directors of the company for the ensuing year, and at once organized by electing Henry Porch, president; A. C. Heck, vice-president; Fred H. Glessner, secretary; George W. Kimmel, treasurer. On September 5 the contract for drilling was let to Brownier & Martin, of Bradford, Pennsylvania, at the following prices: $2,200 for 1,200 feet; $2,800 for 1,600 feet, and $3,200 for 2,000 feet. Messrs. Eckels, Coons and Stringfellow were appointed to select a location for the well, and chose a site on the land of Dr. Oesterlin, in the east part of the town. Work was commenced at once, and at a depth of 314 feet the first vein of gas was struck; the second at 516 feet; the third at 618; oil at 718 feet, and the general bed of gas at 1,092 feet. They, however, drilled on to a depth of 1,648 feet, which was reached December 5, 1884, and operations stopped. The drilling of the well costing $2,825. Soon after the gas was piped into town and the use of natural gas became a reality. Derricks began to loom up in all directions and the news spread with rapidity over the entire country.

Speculators began to pour in from every direction; syndicates were formed; vast tracts of land were laid out into lots, and sales were rapidly made at enormous prices. In the meantime other large gas wells were being brought forth by various parties, and excitement was running at a very rapid speed, but on the morning of January 20, 1886, when the great Karg well broke forth with its tremendous roar, caused by the escape of 20,000,000 cubic feet of gas, imagine the excitement. The gas was placed under control January 25, 1886, and at an early hour the torch was applied. Then it was that a bright, fiery flame shot upward toward the sky to a height of fully one hundred feet, and the rushing noise could be heard for a distance of five miles. The light from the flame could be seen for a distance of fifty miles on a cloudy night; and for a considerable distance, all about the well, the grass was growing with the luxuriance of May, and the water in the river below, everywhere else covered with ice, was as blue and limpid as a lake.

In the autumn of 1886 manufacturing establishments began to locate and inside of two years Findlay became one of the largest manufacturing cities in the state; glass factories, rolling mills, brick and tile factories, potteries, lantern works, tube works, wire nail factories, indeed all sort of manufacturing establishments seemed to tumble over each other to gain a foothold in a place where gas seemed to be inexhaustible, and until the days of the great gas celebration over fifty manufacturing enterprises had established a foothold in the great gas center of the world.

June 8, 9 and 10 were probably the three greatest days that Findlay ever witnessed in all her history. These were the days on which we celebrated the anniversary of the first application of natural gas to the mechanical arts, and well may they long be remembered. We have not the space to give this account in full, but will be somewhat brief.

The first day a large procession headed by five enormous bands formed in front of the Chamber of Commerce from which point they proceeded to and laid the corner-stone of the Lagrange rolling mill amid appropriate ceremonies. Owing to extreme heat the ceremony at this place was made to answer for the similar occasion at the Moore Chair factory, Union Boiler works, Ohio Coil and Cable Chain works, and Findlay Door and Sash factory.

At 1:30 o'clock in the afternoon the same bands, together with a large procession marched to Camp Garfield, at the Fair Grounds, and enjoyed a very interesting time in a military contest. Early in the evening the immense crowd of people who had come in on the trains was largely augmented by our citizens from the country who came in to see the sights, and long before dark the broad Main street of our city was a living, moving mass of humanity for over a mile in length. Doorways and windows and every point of observation were crowded.

"What a magnificent sight!" "What a wonderful spectacle!" were the exclamations heard on every side when the gas was lighted on the many arches which spanned Main street, and when the gas was turned on in the standpipes from the wells the crowd for a moment stood quiet with fear and awe and then were heard murmurs and exclamations of surprise on every hand.

The spectacle was grand beyond words to tell or brush to paint. There were eighteen arches spanning the streets each with a half-dozen flambeau flames from the top circle, while on each side of the arch there were two dozen burners with different colored globes. Added to these were thousands of burners on the buildings along the streets, and to this was added the roar and flames of a dozen gas wells. The stars in the heavens were paled with the effulgent light of nature's last and best gift to man—natural gas.

On and on for three days, long to be remembered, did this gala affair last. Speeches, fireworks, contests and speeches galore until the evening of the third day when the crowd began to disperse, the din of music became less distinct and later on the stillness of night seemed to say—'tis done.

This was the height of the great gas boom. It held up on a level for a year or more and with the decline of years the gas has gone glimmering. But thanks be to Him who controls the affairs of men, oil has taken its place and in a more permanent and staple form.

One winter morning in 1859, Daniel Dixon, an old-time citizen of Findlay, while passing by an old abandoned well near the present site of the rear of Frey's drug store, noticed a strong gaseous odor coming from it. The oil excitement was then at its fever heat, owing to some very rich discoveries in Pennsylvania, and thinking that perhaps he had found a sign of the much-sought for article, Mr. Dixon procured an iron bar and began forcing it through the debris. A passerby noticed the actions of Mr. Dixon and inquired the meaning of the vigorous probing. Mr. Dixon, with a twinkle in his eye, responded: "It's oil; Squire, oil!" In fact it was the odor of gas but the greasy substance that came with the gas was oil. In 1861 an oil company was organized with the following citizens as stockholders: Wm. H. Wheeler, Robert S. Mungen, U. G. Baker, C. A. Croninger, Albert Langworthy, David Goucher, H. P. Gage, E. M.

Burkle, Wm. Mungen, J. B. Horn & Co., Wm. Vanlue, Jesse Wolf, Frederick Henderson, George H. Crook, Israel Green, Jesse Guise, Henry Brown, Isaac Davis, Dr. Bass Rawson and Wm. C. Cox. The company was organized by electing Israel Green, president; Robert S. Mungen, secretary, and E. M. Burkle, treasurer. The spot selected for the well was a few rods southeast of the Presbyterian church, but this idea was abandoned through the breaking out of the war and was never resumed. In 1864 a well was started on the Jacob Carr property by two men from Gallipolis, Ohio, and sunk to the depth of 141 feet when the drill stuck and the well was abandoned. This was done by a spring pole process. Other oil companies were afterward organized but nothing ever came of them, until the drilling in of the Oesterlin gas well in 1884, when at the depth of 718 feet a flow of oil was obtained.

Although oil was found in small quantities in various gas wells, it did not develop as an industry of any importance until about August, 1886, owing probably to the low price of the powerful fluid. But be that as it may, this industry has been on the incline for the last seventeen years, and at present go where you may over this grand county of ours and you will see oil derricks dotting the surface of the earth, in village-like formation, giving to the entire county an appearance of the top covering of one of the best oil reservoirs located anywhere in the Buckeye state. Not only this, imagine the thousands upon thousands of dollars expended in prospecting for this hidden treasure; also, the thousands upon thousands of dollars of reward in return; the hundreds of families and individuals who have made their all from some so-called "streak of luck," and the hundreds of innocent children and loving wives fed and clothed from the profits realized from this rather undoubtful adventure. But long may she live and continue to bless the households of this, one of the greatest, grandest and noblest counties on the face of God's green earth.

CHAPTER XIV.

COURT HOUSES.

The first court of common pleas was held in June, 1828, in the old log school house located in the vicinity of where the C., S. & C. depot now stands in the rear of the Central school building, and this edifice was used as a court house for three or four years thereafter.

At the December session of the county commissioners held on the 5th day of said month, 1831, it was ordered that "advertisements be posted up in three public places for constructing, putting up and finishing a frame building in the village of Findlay to be of the following dimensions:

The building to be 24 by 36 feet, two stories high, with sufficient doors and windows. The building to be weather-boarded with black walnut, except the front, which was to be ornamented by having the weather-boarding of poplar, which appeared to be the most valuable in those days.

January 16, 1832, the county commissioners met to consider sealed proposals for the erection of the new court house, the contract being let to Wilson Vance, Frederick Henderson and Jonathan Parker for the sum of $700.00.

June 29, 1833, the county commissioners entered into contract with Parlee Carlin for lathing and plastering the new court house, which was to be completed November 1, 1833, but was not accepted by the commissioners until November 5, 1833.

This fine structure (so considered at that time) was erected on the southwest corner of Main and Crawford streets, the site now occupied by E. P. Jones' National block, in which is located the First National Bank. This structure was used and occupied as a court house, school house and church until the completion of the brick court house in 1842, and remained at the above-named place until 1863, being used for many years as a hotel, after its abandonment by the county. It was then removed to South Main street, where it still remains, being situated just north of the Donnell block.

On the 6th day of June, 1837, the county commissioners ordered "that the auditor give notice in the Findlay Courier that proposals will be received on the 4th day of July next at the auditor's office in Findlay to make two hundred thousand good brick to build county buildings in Findlay and that a draft or model shall be drawn of the court house suitable for the county at the expense of the county.

Second Court House.

The records do not disclose any transaction relative to the erection of the new court house further than "that John McCurdy was the builder;" and by a vigorous search of the old records of the county auditor I find that from certain entries in an old account book that the court house was probably begun in the latter part of 1837, and that the same was not completed until 1842, costing $7,953.22.

At the time of the commencement of the new court house, in 1886, the old one was sold to Richard Hennesy, February 1 for $125, the building to be torn down by April 1, 1886.

The old fence was moved to the infirmary, December 9, 1885.

The old brick court house having been engaged for over forty years with the din of public life, hearing the settlement of family and neighborhood difficulties, and the hustling of the busy officers administering justice to the public, the appointed time came for a life-long vacation. The increase of business of the various offices caused by an increase in the population and industrial and commercial business of the county demanded a larger and more substantial edifice.

On the 17th day of April, 1885, the legislature of the state of Ohio passed an act authorizing the building of a court house in Findlay, Hancock county, Ohio, and the issuance of $100,000 of bonds to meet the payment of the same. June 5, 1885, the committee, consisting of C. S. Kelley, J. M. Moorhead and A. S. Beck, commissioners of Hancock county; G. W. Galloway, appointed by the court of common pleas, together with G. W. Myers, probate judge; Lemuel McManness, sheriff, and Presley E. Hay, clerk of the courts, met to make preliminary arrangements and consider the plans of the newly contemplated seat of justice.

September 11, 1885, Wm. T. Platt, county auditor, was ordered to advertise for bids for the erection of said court house. The bids were opened on October 20, and the contract awarded to W. H. Campfield for $71,576 on the 7th day of November. This was to be the price for erecting the court house as far as is commonly called "an enclosure."

August 11, 1886, the corner-stone of the new court house was laid amid appropriate ceremonies and a grand celebration, consisting of speeches, music, parades and accompanied in the evening with a grand display of gas illuminations.

October 3, 1887, the county auditor was ordered to advertise for bids for the completion of the court house. The contract was let November 10 to W. H. Campfield for $50,314.25, thus it will plainly be seen that the cost of our court house was in the first place as anticipated to be a grand palace for the low price of $121,890.25. That was the legal contract price of our court house, and such should have been the cost of the erection, but by a comparison which will be made later on you will observe that the cost of our court house was such as to warrant the erection and furnishing of a queen's palace. The contract for the furniture was let October 28, 1887, to Conant Brothers for $8,913.63. The vault furniture to Hines, Kelley & Co. for $2,940.

The erection and construction of the court house was pushed along as rapidly as possible and on the 27th day of October, 1888, the grand structure was dedicated to the use of the public. The architecture in the main is classic, though the roof is pitched and the annoyance and inconvenience of a flat roof avoided. The outside finish of the building is entirely of stone with rock face work and richly trimmed with cut stone. The front windows are large and showy, the smallest having a five-foot opening and the largest one of seven feet. Each window has forty-four square feet of plate glass or more and ample light is furnished in every part of the building. No wood whatever, excepting window frames, doors and a portion of the floors, is used in the construction of the edifice and is guaranteed fireproof. The tower is 130 feet high from ground to top and 107 feet to the center of the clock dial. It is finished with a dome roof surmounted with a statue of John Hancock 16 feet high. The tower is built entirely of iron and stone and is 24 feet square. The clock dial is 9 feet in diameter and can be illuminated with gas or electric lights. The edifice is 142 feet long and 82 feet wide, and 146 feet from ground to top. Entrance into the first floor hall from the front on the east is through a stone portico supported by four polished granite columns 20 inches in diameter. This portico is designed as a protection for the first flight of steps so often left uncovered.

The portico, 12 feet high, is surmounted by an imposing entablature extending up to the roof. In this is a magnificent stained glass window 12x26 feet in size opening out upon the balcony, having an archway top and extending through two stories. The whole effect of this is similar to the grand triumphal arch at Paris built by Napoleon and called the Arc D'Triomphe. This arch is surmounted with a group of feminine figures representing Justice, Law and Mercy. Two small easy flights of stairs separated by a vestibule lead through double doors into a spacious hallway running through the building, intercepted by a traverse hallway 18 feet wide and 75 feet long.

Present Court House.

In the center is an octagon rotunda twenty (20) feet square with a gallery up through and into the dome. It is furnished with tile floors and iron ceilings, and the walls are of fine pressed and enameled brick. To the right of the hall near the entrance a door opens into the treasurer's office for the reception of city taxes and an archway from that leads into the main office of the same official, where taxes in general are received. Three places of entrance are provided and the room is 24 feet by 28 feet. To the north and adjoining the general collecting room is the treasurer's money vault and private office, the private office being 13x15 feet in dimensions.

This is about the size of all the private offices. Immediately adjoining this office to the west is the auditor's office, consisting of three rooms. The main office is 30 by 35 feet in size and has communication with the treasurer's office by means of a sliding window. Beside the private office and work-room adjoining there is a large fire-proof record vault 13x28 feet in dimensions and containing a window. To the south of and adjoining the auditor's vault and office is the commissioners' room, 17x24 feet.

On the left side at the front entrance is the sheriff's office, 16x18 feet in size. This is connected with the common pleas court room on the second floor by means of a private stairway.

At the south end of the traverse hall is the entrance to the probate court room, 24x30 feet in dimensions, which, like the auditor's office, is separated from the hall by a stained glass screen. Adjoining on the east side is the probate judge's office, while to the north of the office is the record vault. To the west of the probate court room is the retiring room for the witnesses, which is also used as a private office.

The southwest portion of the first floor is used by the recorder, who has a private office to the south and a record vault to the north of the main office. This completes the description of the first floor.

The second floor may be reached by climbing a grand double iron stair case at the rear of the main hall. It has midway landings and a large stained glass window looks out in the rear. In the southwest portion of the floor away from the din and noise of the street, is the common pleas court room, 35x40 feet in dimensions. It is furnished with amphitheater tiers of seats, and the general public may gain entrance through large double doors. Back of the bar railings are several private entrances for officials and those having business with the court so that they need not push their way through the crowds in the court room. The judges' bench is in an archway in the partition dividing the court room from the judges' room, and a room for the law library and for attorneys' consultation with clients.

On this floor also is conveniently located apartments for grand and petit juries and waiting witnesses. These are handsomely furnished and have cloak rooms and water closets attached. The clerk's desk in the court room is connected directly with the clerk's suite of three offices in the front part of the second floor. In the northeast corner the prosecuting attorney has a good-sized office and convenient consultation rooms.

To the west of this office and at the north end of the traverse hall there is an office for the county school examiners.

In the northwest corner a room of ample size has been set apart as a circuit court room and immediately adjoining this on the south is a large room for the circuit judges.

The basement has a spacious assembly hall for conventions and public gatherings. Besides this there is the surveyor's office, a public library room, reading room and janitor's boiler and work rooms most conveniently arranged.

This all sounds nice on paper; to peruse the foregoing pages and reflect over the exertions and hardships endured by the proper parties in building an edifice to be used as a seat of justice to each and every person who might have in some manner and degree, business transactions to perform—, a monument to which the farmer, the merchant, the manufacturer and the daily laborer may point with pride.

But there comes a time when the enjoyment comes first and the privations through which you must naturally pass to reimburse the proper party for this enjoyment comes afterwards. And, indeed, the subject now at hand is no exception. Here is a magnificent structure erected for the people and by the people, but how many of the people had a voice in saying how much of their hard-earned money should be expended for this monument of justice. But I will vouch for the intelligent people of Hancock county, for there are none other than intelligent, that gladly would they step up to the treasurer's window and deposit a portion of their hard-earned cash to help erect a court house which is an honor to the city and county as well as to the people, if the same had been erected and furnished so that the entire cost would have been a reasonable amount. And I doubt seriously if there are many who know within $200,000 of the exact cost of the court house, or, in other words, what it will cost when paid for.

For the benefit of our readers I will give in detail the cost of the court house as it was constructed:

W. H. Campfield & Son, contractors.....	$250,758.62
Conant Bros. et al., furniture.....	21,146.79
Weary & Cramer, architects.....	11,357.41
Smead & Co., heating.....	9,270.00
Howard Watch & Clock Co., clock and bell.....	2,775.00
Hall Safe & Lock Co., time locks, doors, etc.....	2,400.00
McHenry & Co., chandeliers.....	2,260.15
Wm. Burge, superintendent.....	2,454.56
Statutory group	1,900.00
Bakewell & Midlins, statue (John Hancock).....	950.00
Total.....	$305,272.53

It will probably be plain to the reader that there was no money at hand to meet these payments until there could be bonds issued to pay for the same—the money to pay the bonds being raised by taxation, to which fund every taxpayer has, since 1886, contributed a share of his taxes, and will continue to contribute until the year 1918.

The following schedule gives in detail the amount of bonds issued and the time of continuance of the same, together with the rate of interest, the premium, and amount of interest accumulating on the same:

April 15, 1886, 100 \$1,000 bonds at $4\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. premium \$1,570. Redeemable from January 15, 1897, to July 15, 1905. Interest accumulating on same, \$65,700.

October 26, 1887, 60 $1,000 bonds at 6 per cent.. Redeemable from October 26, 1891, to October 26, 1894. Interest accumulating on same, $19,800.

May 1, 1888, 60 $1,000 bonds at 5 per cent., premium $2,700. Redeemable one-half May 1, 1913, and one-half May 1, 1918. Interest accumulating on same, $82,500.

June 1, 1888, 15 $1,000 bonds at 5 per cent., premium $450; redeemable June 1, 1915. Accumulated interest, $20,250.

August 15, 1888, 25 $1,000 bonds at 6 per cent., redeemable from February 15, 1890, to 1892. Accumulated interest, $3,750.

December 15, 1888, 28 \$1,000 bonds at $5\frac{1}{2}$ per cent., redeemable December 15, 1894, and December 15, 1895. Accumulated interest, \$10,010.

September 25, 1894, 30 $1,000 bonds at 5 per cent., premium $450; redeemable September 25, 1907, 1908, 1909. Accumulated interest, $21,000.

This makes a total amount of money received for bonds of $318,000, together with $5,170 premium, making $323,170 received. Of this amount $30,000 was refunding bonds, leaving $293,170 actual money received from sale of court house bonds. But, however, in redeeming said bonds the county through its taxpayers must pay back $288,000, together with the interest of $223,010, making the entire cost of our court house reach the enormous sum of $511,010—a very expensive luxury.

CHAPTER XV.

THE JAILS.

On the 12th day of June, 1830, John P. Hamilton and Charles McKinnis, commissioners, agreed upon the building of a county jail, and ordered the county auditor to advertise the same, to be let to the lowest responsible bidder on the 3d day of July, 1830. The dimensions of the jail were agreed upon July 26, 1830, and was ordered built upon the following plans:

"Said jail to be 16 feet in width and 24 feet in length, with a partition in the center; the timber to be white oak, 12 inches square: the building to be provided with two doors and three windows." This building was erected about midway between the present court house ground and the Farmers' National Bank; said building costing about $250.00.

On the 12th day of January, 1852, the county commissioners entered into a contract with Thomas McCrary for the construction of a county jail and sheriff's house; the building to cost $4,743, and to be completed by the 13th day of April, 1853. On the 10th day of February, 1852, the county commissioners purchased lot No. 58 in The addition of Abraham W. Swab for $175. The building still stands at the same location, being situated north of the present county jail, and being the third residence north of the present jail. The premises are now owned by Lana Weber.

On the 4th day of February, 1879, the county commissioners contracted with B. F. Kimmons for the purchasing of lots 29 and 30, situated on the northwest corner of Main Cross street and Broadway, for $5,000.00. March 4 of the same year the deed was signed and turned over to the commissioners.

On the 10th day of April the contract for the erection of the county jail and sheriff's residence was let to Jacob Karst, of Defiance, for $17,264. The architect was J. C. Johnson, who drew the plans for the construction.

The Present County Jail.

The jail and sheriff's residence situated northwest from the court house and immediately across the street is one of the finest in the state and consists of a parlor, sitting-room, kitchen, pantry, sheriff's office and hall, two female departments, with closets attached, and sixteen cells for the incarceration of prisoners.

CHAPTER XVI.

HANCOCK COUNTY INFIRMARY.

On April 1, 1867, the question of purchasing a site for a county infirmary and the building of the same was submitted to the voters of Hancock county, and it being decided by a vote of 2,253 against 745 to build an infirmary. The county commissioners on the 2d day of May purchased of George Heck the northeast part of Section 15 and the southeast part of Section 16, in Libertytownship, consisting of 225 acres, for $17,100. Soon after John Guise was authorized to draw plans for the new infirmary.

Hancock County Infirmary.

March 4, 1868, the contract was awarded to John Shull for $12,393 and the contract entered into on the 7th day of March.

The county infirmary is situated about two and one-half miles west of the city of Findlay, and will compare with any in the state considering the rank of the county.

The main building is 40 feet wide by 75 feet long, four stories high, including basement. The basement is eight feet in the clear, constructed of stone, of which three feet is below the surface of the ground. The walls of the basement are two feet thick. The second floor walls are seventeen inches and the partitions 12 inches in thickness. The second story is eleven feet in the clear. The third and fourth stories are each ten feet in the clear and the outside walls thirteen inches in thickness. The building is covered with a slate roof.

On the 7th day of May, 1869, the commissioners contracted with D. C. Fisher for the erection of an insane department for the sum of $3,370.50. This new structure is twenty-two feet wide by forty feet long. The foundation is three feet below the surface and eighteen inches above. The building is twenty feet four inches above the foundation, making the entire height twenty-four feet and ten inches. This building is divided into small apartments and is used for the insane and partially demented inmates of the infirmary.

Since the erection of this building there has been erected a large barn and various sheds, together with a requisite number of outbuildings to make the place a convenient one as well as to add to its value. The farm has proven itself to be of good oil productive qualities and for several years the entire expense of the infirmary has been paid by the income from oil. This institution is manipulated by three infirmary directors, elected by the people (one each year), and by a superintendent and matron appointed by the directors.

CHAPTER XVII.

HANCOCK COUNTY AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY.

On the 30th day of August, 1851, a number of farmers and friends of agriculture congregated at the court house and after discussing the project of organizing a society, adjourned until the first Saturday in October, at which time an organization was effected. The first fair was held on October 15, 1852, on rented grounds north of the river on what was known as the Brunner brick-yard.

On February 9, 1859, eight acres of land in East Findlay lying in the northeast corner of Blanchard street and Blanchard road, was purchased of J. H. Wilson for the consideration of $800. The first fair on the new grounds was held October 5, 6 and 7, 1859.

May 20, 1868, the old fair ground was sold to Samuel Hoxter for $1,750, and a new site purchased of Timothy Russell and John Powell for $3,000. This new location was situated on South Main street about one mile south of Sandusky street, and comprised 29.40 acres of ground.

The first fair was held on the newly purchased grounds October 1, 2 and 3, 1868.

On the 11th day of June, 1890, the county commissioners sold the beautiful grove on South Main street to O. A. Ballard, A. H. Balsley, George Cusac, F. H. Glessner, Adam Fulhart and Lemuel McManness for $26,500. These beautiful grounds comprising a portion of the east half of the southeast quarter and part of the west half of the southeast quarter of Section 24, T. 1 N., R. 10 E., was one of the most beautiful in the state and on these grounds the Agricultural society had many a successful fair, both financially and socially. But $26,500 was a tempting morsel to the county and the same was accordingly sold.

July 6, 1891, the county commissioners purchased the north part of the northeast quarter of Section 36, T. 1 N., R. 10 E., of J. G. Hull for $10,500. This tract is situated about one mile farther south than the old grounds and consists of a large farm of 70 acres, having sold 6.30 acres August 31, 1891, to Theodore Gibson for $925.57.

After the new fair grounds were paid for the balance of the sale money was used in improving the grounds; and not only was the amount of $15,925.57 used in improvements, but one-fourth of a mill of a blanket tax was levied over the entire county in 1893 to help replenish the funds of the Agricultural society, besides the county commissioners set aside various amounts at divers times from the dog fund to help along the good cause.

CHAPTER XVIII.

HANCOCK COUNTY IN THE WAR WITH SPAIN.

That old Hancock county has ever rallied to every need of the national government no one will deny. A spirit of patriotism has ever pervaded every hamlet and home within her borders. When the president issued his call on April 26, 1898, for 125,000 troops to wrest Cuba from the tyrannical rule of Spain, 200,000 men offered their services and many a young patriot was disappointed because his services were not required of him. It was a mighty uprising for a nation that all felt was looking to ours for protection. A premonitory thrill seemed to sweep the country as in the memorable days of the early sixties. Ours is a country that has ever despised profligate despotisms and tyrannical rule. Scarcely a year had passed since 1875 without the plea of the Cuban patriot was heard throughout the entire country. It was in congress and the press that the enormities of Spanish despotism and cruelties had been most passionately dwelt upon. During the last ten years a group of daring men arose in the island of Cuba who were in a great measure harassing the Spanish force on the island, but their greatest achievement was the forcing of their deeds and their heroism upon the attention of the entire civilized world. The journals of the old as well as this country rang daily with protests against the oppressive rule and cruelties of the Spanish monarchy. President Cleveland, in the last years of his administration, warned the Spanish ministry that the patience and tolerance of the people of the United States had been dangerously tried; that it behooved wise men to make such a change in the conduct of affairs in the island as would give contentment to the majority. The heritage of woe left the islanders by Captain General Weyler was too much for diplomacy to reconcile with the methods of civilized government. The crisis was reached when the battleship Maine was blown up in Havana harbor. This noble ship had gone to the islands on a peaceful mission and was blown up at 9:45 p. m., February 15, 1898. The country was horrified and thrilled from center to circumference by this appalling disaster. Two hundred and sixty-six noble lives had been snuffed out in an instant. The country was chagrined at the awful calamity. One of our largest battleships with 266 men had been destroyed almost within sight of our shores. Americans have never been known to tolerate such an atrocity nor did they tolerate it in this instance. Affairs took form rapidly. On historic April 19, President McKinley, with the concurrence of congress, issued an ultimatum to Spain by which they must cease their warfare and withdraw their army from Cuba or take the consequences. As no particular attention was paid to this, war was formally declared on April 25 and the president called for 125,000 volunteers for the approaching war of humanity. Space forbids us going into detail, but suffice it for us to say that about 160 of the stalwart young men of Hancock county responded to the call. The country was in a tumult and Findlay was daily thronged by thousands anxious to get the latest telegraphic news regarding the situation. Company A, Second regiment, Ohio National Guard, was rapidly recruited. The company was commanded by Captain Lafferty and Lieutenants Barnd and Biggs. The company left Findlay on the 8:40 south bound T. & O. C. train for Kenton on the morning of April 26 and arrived in Kenton at 10 o'clock. Here the company spent two days in the Catholic school building, while the regiment was being mobilized at that place. The morning of April 26 will long be remembered in Findlay. Probably 15,000 people cheered the boys as they marched to the depot headed by the K. of P. band. Bells were rung, whistles blown and flags were hung at half mast. Old veterans forgot their infirmities and with streaming eyes and gallant tread followed the boys to the depot. How vividly did the old boys recall the stirring events of former days and consider the awful calamity of war. Tears were in evidence on every side as Findlay saw her gallant company off. Certainly no better specimens of young manhood ever marched away than those in line that morning, and they were worthy of all the homage they received. Two days later the entire regiment left Kenton for Camp Bushnell at Columbus. Here the regiment was rapidly drilled as it was generally thought that they would see active service in the near future. The regiment was mustered into the U. S. service on May 10, and left Columbus for Chickamauga Park on the following Monday, May 16, where it arrived on the 20th, having spent two days in Chattanooga. May 25 President McKinley issued a call for 75,000 additional men, and, accordingly, Private John Arnold returned to Findlay and enlisted 37 recruits to fill company A to its full quota. These men reached the park on June 26. The company left the park on August 28 and went to Camp Poland, Knoxville, where it remained until November 16. On this date the company was sent to Camp Fornanse, at Macon, Georgia, where it was mustered out on February 10, starting for home on the same day. Findlay was reached on the following Sunday morning before daylight. A banquet had been prepared on Saturday evening for the boys, but their arrival was much later than was expected and consequently they did not reach Findlay in time to enjoy it. The boys had returned without any victories to their credit, but they had done their duty and obeyed orders—all any man can do. It was a sad disappointment that the national government had not required their active services in the field. However no man need be ashamed, who proffers his life if it need be, to maintain his country. The sacrifice had been freely offered but Providence had not required it at the hands of the national government. A second company had been organized under John F. Altman as captain and J. S. Downey and J. L. Zeigler as first and second lieutenant. However they were never called out. Not one of the Findlay company died while in camp. A few days after the company left Findlay a grand flag-raising was held at the court house. This was on Saturday afternoon, April 30. The flag wa of silk and was 11 by 22 feet in dimensions. Speeches were made by Colonel J. A. Bope and John Poe. Captain J. R. Tussing was chairman of the celebration. In Arcadia and McComb like celebrations were held. Quite a few of the young men of the county enlisted with other military organizations outside the county, among which were B. L. Dukes, Will Bolton, Charles W. Damon and Harry Farquhar, who were members of the First Ohio volunteer cavalry. Among the Hancock county boys who lost their lives while in the service were Thomas Holden, who died of fever in Porto Rico; John Dillon, who died while on his return from the Philippines of fever at San Francisco, and George Hess, who was killed while in action in the Philippines. Among those that have joined the great majority since returning home are John E. Umwick, Walter Carter, Harry Radabaugh, Harry Farquhar, Burnard Maxwell and Harry Goodman, three of whom were killed by accident. As the years beat upon the citadel of life may Providence spare the lives of our citizen soldiery and may they live lives of usefulness to the country they have helped to honor and protect in times of its greatest need. Soldiers who obey orders receive the plaudits and gratitude of a thankful nation. Comrades, let us obey the orders of Him who rewards the faithful with the prize of all prizes—eternal life. When we obey the last trumpet call may we “fall in” on the right hand of Him who is the light of the eternal city of Paradise.

CHAPTER XIX.

PHYSICIANS OF THE COUNTY.

BASS RAWSON.

Bass Rawson, the first permanent physician in Hancock county, was born April 17, 1799, in the town of Orange, Franklin county, Massachusetts. He is one of the five brothers who removed from Massachusetts at an early day and settled in Ohio, four being physicians. In his boyhood he worked on a farm and attended a country school. From the farm he went to learn the trade of hatter, which he worked at until he was about twenty years of age, but, his health somewhat failing him, he determined to relinquish it and engage in the study of medicine. With this end in view, he entered an academy at New Salem, Massachusetts, which he attended several terms. In the meantime he taught school for the purpose of earning money to defray the necessary expense of his education. At the age of twenty-five he married and immigrated to Ravenna, Ohio, where he remained a few months. He then removed to Otsego county, New York, and located at Richfield. Here he again taught school. Previous to his leaving Massachusetts he had studied medicine for a few months, but on his return to the east he took up the study seriously, with the intention of qualifying himself as a physician, Dr. Thomas, of Richfield, becoming his preceptor. In the winter of 1826-27 he attended medical lectures at Dartmouth college, New Hampshire, and at the close of the collegiate term returned to his father's house at New Salem, and continued the reading of medicine with Dr. Brooks, of Orange. In June, 1828, he removed to Ohio and practiced a little more than a year with his brother, Dr. Secretary Rawson, who resided in Medina county, Ohio. In September, 1829, he removed to Findlay, where he settled permanently in the practice of his profession. The place had been but recently settled, and only twelve white families resided within its limits, the Indians being more numerous than the whites. Here the doctor practiced, without cessation, for over sixty years. He was a member and earnest supporter of the Presbyterian church. In politics Mr. Rawson was a Republican. On December 28, 1891, he breathed his last, and passed into the beyond, where his reward for good to his fellowmen was awaiting him.

WILLIAM H. BALDWIN.

William H. Baldwin was born in Champaign county, Ohio, January 16, 1810, and settled in Findlay, Ohio, in the fall of 1832. Having studied and attended lectures at Cincinnati, he entered the medical profession in early life and rose to a very respectable rank as a physician. His high reputation and success gained him a very large practice, which extended into adjoining counties, as well as all over the one in which he lived. His extensive practice necessitated long and frequent rides, and those who enjoy the advantages and improvements of the present day know but little of what those rides involved; there were but few well-beaten roads and scarcely any bridges; streams had to be forded, swamps and marshes had to be crossed, and large tracts of country often under water had to be traveled; but distance, difficulties and ceaseless labors neither discouraged nor checked this faithful physician in his untiring efforts to relieve the afflicted, honor his profession, and supply the wants of those dependent on him for support. Dr. Baldwin was married April 19, 1835, to Mary J. Patterson, who was born July 13, 1817, in Harrison county, Ohio, daughter of John Patterson, who came to Findlay in 1834. In all the relations of life Dr. Baldwin was considerate, respectful, just and honorable, and enjoyed the highest esteem of all the people; but hard and indefatigable labors at last produced their effects; the vigorous constitution was impaired, and he who had been the embodiment of health, and had so successfully practiced the healing art upon others, became prematurely old and feeble, as all can testify who saw him totter on his staff during the few years before his death, which occurred December 14, 1868.

CHARLES OESTERLIN.

Charles Oesterlin, physician, was born in Weinsburg, Kingdom of Wurtemberg, October 5, 1807. When quite young he attended school at Laufen on the Neckar. At fourteen he entered the gymnasium at Stuttgart, from which he graduated at the age of eighteen in a thorough literary, scientific and classical course. He then went to Duingen, where he engaged in medical studies under an able professor. In 1832 he came to America, and after spending some considerable time in traveling through the country, located in Ashland, Ohio, in 1834. September 30, 1836, he came to Findlay, where he engaged in his profession until his death, which occurred January 18, 1889. In 1846 he embarked in merchandising here for two years, at which time he retired; from 1848 to 1862 he served in the councils of the city; in 1871 he was elected to the legislature and filled that office for one term. In 1863 Mr. Oesterlin visited his native land, and again in 1876, when he was recalled by the loss of several thousand dollars through the breaking of the Findlay Savings Bank company. In June, 1885, along with his estimable wife, who has always accompanied him, he again started for his old home in the Fatherland, but got sick in New York and did not cross the ocean, but returned home. Mr. Oesterlin has ever been an ardent supporter of all measures tending to advance public interest. He was probably the first to advocate boring for natural gas at this place and was one of the stockholders of the Findlay Natural Gas Company.

DR. WILLIAM D. CARLIN.

Dr. William D. Carlin was born at Maumee City, April 27, 1822. His parents had settled here previous to the war of 1812. Dr. Carlin was the son of Squire Carlin, a pioneer of Hancock county of the year 1826. Our subject was but four years of age when his parents settled in Findlay. Here he grew to manhood. He obtained such education as the limited facilities of a frontier village could furnish. Before he was twenty years old he began the study of medicine with Dr. Bass Rawson, the pioneer physician of the county. In March, 1843, one month before he was twenty-one years of age, he graduated with honors from the Cincinnati Medical college. After his graduation Dr. Carlin began the practice of his profession in Findlay and continued actively until 1846, when he was made surgeon of the Fifteenth United States regular infantry and went with his command to Mexico as that country and the United States were at war. He was the youngest surgeon in the American army. He served with distinction during the struggle and achieved a high reputation both as a soldier and surgeon. After his return from the war Dr. Carlin resumed the practice of his profession in Findlay. March 6, 1845, he was married to Harriet E. H. Rawson, daughter of Dr. Bass Rawson, his medical preceptor. Three children were the fruits of this union; Dr. Cass. R. Carlin, ex-Senator William L. Carlin and Mrs. Sarah A. Dondore. Of the three, only one, William L., is now living. In 1849, on the discovery of gold in California, Dr. Carlin made a trip to the new gold fields in company with his father, brother and others. The party crossed the great plains and the Rocky mountains. On his return to Ohio he made a second trip to the gold region, going and returning by sea and the isthmus of Panama. In the spring of 1862 he was appointed chief surgeon of the Fifty-seventh regiment, Ohio volunteer infantry, in the civil war. His experience in the Mexican war had given him a reputation as an army surgeon, and this fact was recognized by the government in making the appointment. Dr. Carlin did splendid service in his regiment and was the means of preventing much suffering and many hardships. He died in the service of his country at Milliken's Bend, Tennessee, December 26, 1862, four months before reaching his forty-first year. He led an active and useful life. Dr. Carlin was a man of kind and generous impulses and was held in high esteem by his fellow citizens. He was enterprising and public-spirited and ever ready to do what he could to advance the interests of the town and county. He was held in great respect by the members of the medical profession, who depended largely upon him for advice and counsel. At the time he entered the service of the civil war he had a large and lucrative practice in the town and county. He was grandfather of Rawson K. Carlin, present police judge of Findlay.

ANSON HURD.

Anson Hurd, M. D., was born in Twinsburg, Summit county, Ohio, December 27, 1824. His parents, Robert and Marv (Brainerd) Hurd, hailed from Connecticut, and came from families whose names were connected with the early settlement of that state. In 1839 Robert removed from Twinsburg, Ohio, to this county, and for many years was a prominent leader in the development of Hancock county, laying out and platting the town of Arlington in 1844. He died in 1860, at the age of seventy-six, leaving a large family, who at present is scattered considerably over the country. Our subject came with his brother, Jared, to this county, and at Arlington cleared the land and built the cabin occupied by their father on his arrival. At the age of twenty he returned to Twinsburg, where he remained for three years under the instruction of the Rev. Samuel Bissell, D. D., president of Twinsburg institute. He then taught school in Pike county, where, becoming acquainted with the Hon. J. I. Van Meter, of that county, he obtained a scholarship in Delaware college. After spending three years in that institution he engaged in the study of medicine with Dr. William Blackstone, of Athens, and after a year repaired to Columbus and read in the office of Professor Samuel M. Smith, graduating from Starling Medical college in March, 1852. He then located in Oxford, Indiana, where he practiced his profession for many years. In 1861 he represented the counties of White and Benton in the legislature of that state. Soon after the attack on Fort Sumter he was invited by Governor Morton, of Indiana, to accept the post of assistant surgeon of the Twentieth Indiana volunteer infantry, which he accepted, serving through the first campaign to Hatteras. Returning to Fortress Monroe, he resigned his commission in the Twentieth and accepted that of surgeon of the Fourteenth, and served in all the battles of the campaign of 1862. In January, 1863, he resigned his commission, and in April moved to Findlay, where he has since been engaged in the practice of his profession. Dr. Hurd has contributed to various medical journals in the way of some very fine articles, and has held offices of trust in the medical world. He is a liberal supporter of measures tending toward the growth of the community.

LORENZO FIRMIN.

Dr. Lorenzo Firmin was born March 31, 1808, in South Wilbraham, Massachusetts, son of John Firmin. When quite young he learned the trade of shoemaking with his father, with whom he was connected in the east till 1834, when he came west to Richfield, Summit county, Ohio, and entered into partnership with Dr. Secretary Rawson, in a tannery, which he continued in until 1841, when he sold out to O. M. Oviatt, of Richfield. In 1841 he came to Findlay, Ohio, read medicine with Dr. Bass Rawson and graduated in the profession. He practiced at Benton, this county, till 1847, when he returned to Findlay, where he thought an opening existed, owing to the fact that several physicians from Findlay were holding positions in the Mexican war. He was married June 28, 1838, to Clara H., daughter of Dr. Secretary Rawson. They had no children. Dr. Firmin continued his profession in this place until his retirement in 1877. After retirement from medical practice our subject gave his attention to his private business matters, which were many and important.

His first wife having died in 1891, Dr. Firmin was again married in 1894, his second union being with Miss Mary B. Humphrey, a native of Findlay. He was congratulated on his matrimonial event by many old citizens of this city. His death, which occurred October 12, 1901, was received with profound grief by the community, where he so long had been a resident and a very efficient promoter of the interests of the city and county.

WILLIAM M. DETWILER.

Dr. William M. Detwiler was born in Mifflin county, Pennsylvania, August 23, 1832. He learned the trade of plastering with his father and in 1851 came west and located in Findlay, where he carried on his trade for some time. He subsequently moved to Illinois, and, on returning from there in 1859, entered the office of Dr. Oesterlin, where he prosecuted the study of medicine. On the breaking out of the war of the Rebellion our subject left his worthy preceptor's office and enlisted his services in defense of the Union; three years of his time, however, were devoted to service as hospital steward, and upon the close of the war he returned to his medical studies, graduating from the Homeopathic Hospital college of Cleveland, Ohio, in 1867. Dr. Detwiler located in Findlay, and for ten years was prominently identified with the profession of medicine in this portion of the state.

The doctor's death occurred April 30, 1877. He was at that time president of the Ohio State Homeopathic Medical society and also president of the Alumni Association of Cleveland college. The Masonic, Odd Fellows and Knights of Pythias societies, the Findlay Guards and the ex-soldiers all took part in the funeral ceremonies in his memory. Dr. Detwiler was an ardent Sabbath school and church worker, and was an acknowledged leader in all interests he sought to serve.

TOBIAS G. BARNHILL.

Tobias G. Barnhill, physician, Findlay, was born in Wayne county, Ohio, May 5, 1851; son of Joseph and Sarah (Frankhauser) Barnhill, the former a native of that county and of Pennsylvania pioneer ancestry, the latter born in Pickaway county, Ohio. In 1853 they removed to this county and settled in Liberty township, where they reared four sons and three daughters. Our subject, who is the third child, received a good common school education, and at seventeen engaged in teaching; at eighteen he began the study of medicine in the office of Drs. Oesterlin & Detwiler, and in his twenty-second year graduated from the Cleveland Homeopathic Hospital college, class of 1873. He immediately began the practice of his profession in Findlay, and has been successfully connected with it since, introducing in 1880 his valuable medicated baths. He married in 1874 Mary J., daughter of Conrad and Christiana Renninger, pioneers of Liberty township, this county, and they have one son, Joseph C. The doctor is a public-spirited citizen and contributes liberally to the advancement of Hancock county's interests. He is a worthy Odd Fellow, a member of the Legion of Honor, has served as coroner of the county three terms and has been an active member of the board of education of Findlay. He owns and operates a large sanitarium where patients can go and receive the best of care and treatment on very liberal terms.

FRANKLIN WAYNE ENTRIKIN.

Franklin W. Entrikin, M. D., was born in Chester county, Pennsylvania, July 27, 1830; he was the son of Emmor and Susannah (Bennett) Entrikin, of pioneer English Quaker ancestry in that state. In 1832 Emmor Entrikin moved to Columbiana county, Ohio, where he reared a family of five sons and one daughter in the Quaker faith. Franklin W. received a good literary training and at seventeen entered the Quaker academy at Salem, being a class-mate of Byron Shariton, M. D., professor of diseases of women, Miami Medical college, Cincinnati, Ohio. After completing a thorough literary and scientific course there he engaged in the study of dentistry, in which profession he spent a few years. He, however, continued reading medicine and graduated from the Ohio Medical college of Cincinnati. In 1855 he came to Findlay, where he spent most of his time since in professional practice, until his death. He, however, had spent some considerable time in public lecturing on his profession, and for three years held the chair of gynecology in Ft. Wayne, Indiana, Medical college. He has also contributed writings to many leading medical journals. He was a member of the Northwestern Ohio Medical association and the Cleveland Microscopical society. He has had charge of the sanitariums in Cleveland and Green Springs. He served in the capacity of professor of gynecology in the Toledo Medical college in 1885, and delivered a full course of lectures in that institution in 1885 and 1886. The doctor was married in October, 1851, to Sarah Ann, daughter of Thomas Lyon, of Deerfield, Portage county, Ohio, and by her he had three sons: Emmor L., a leading jeweler in this city; Leonidas A., also a jeweler, and Franklin B., a prominent young physician, who is rapidly following in his father's footsteps in his chosen profession. Our subject was a hard-working, painstaking physician and was as much a student in his later days, even up to his death, as he was when young.

FRANCIS W. FIRMIN.

Francis W. Firmin, M. D., was born in Richfield, Summit county, Ohio, July 15, 1842, and is a descendant of pioneers of that name in Massachusetts, who came to our shores in 1630, in the fleet with Governor Winthrop. Our subject is a son of Francis B. and Mary (Chapin) Firmin. He received a good education in Wilbraham, Massachusetts, and at Oberlin, Ohio, in 1862-63. In 1862 he came to Ohio and engaged in the study of medicine with his uncle, Dr. Lorenzo Firmin, and in 1867 graduated from the Cleveland Medical college. He located in Findlay, this county, and has been in very creditable professional work here ever since. He married here in 1869 Mary, L. D., daughter of the Rev. John A. Meeks, a pioneer minister of the Presbyterian church. The doctor is a member of the American Medical association, the Ohio State Medical association, and of the Northwestern Ohio Medical association. July 15, 1863, he enlisted in Company E, One Hundred and Twenty-ninth Ohio volunteer infantry, and after serving his country for eight months was honorably discharged. He holds high rank in his profession, is a liberal contributor to all measures tending to the development of the social and industrial life of this locality.

JACOB A. KIMMEL.

Jacob A. Kimmel, physician, was born in Carroll county, Ohio, September 17, 1844, son of David and Christiana (Oakes) Kimmel. In 1851 David Kimmel settled in Marion township, this county, where four sons and three daughters grew up. Our subject received a good common school education and attended Findlay High school. In February, 1863, he enlisted in defense of the Union, in company A, Twenty-first Ohio volunteer Infantry, and did active service until the end of the war, when he received an honorable discharge. After the close of the war he read medicine in the office of Drs. Entrikin & Ballard, at this place, and graduated from Cleveland Medical college in 1867. He then located in Cannonsburg, where he carried on an active practice till 1872, when he came to Findlay. In 1875 he took a post-graduate course at Bellevue Hospital Medical college of New York City, from which he received a creditable diploma. He married here in 1869, Eliza Ellen, daughter of the venerable citizen, now deceased, Robert Bonham. She passed away this life May 28, 1873, and was laid to rest in Maple Grove cemetery. In 1875 he married Rosa E., daughter of Ambrose Graber, and by her had one son, Alfred Graber. Dr. Kimmel is a worthy member of the G. A. R. He is a clever professional man, an energetic citizen, and a promoter of any public measure which has for its object the betterment of this community.

There may have been other physicians here in the early days of our history as a county, but the names above mentioned were permanent ones and are entitled to their share of credit in assisting to develop the resources of our county. In the days when disease was more prevalent, owing to the dense forests, marshes and low, swampy ground, the smiling countenance of a doctor, when called to allay some unruly fever or other diseases common to those days, was truly a relief to the family, and became their friend in deed as well as a friend in need.

We have not the time nor space to mention the good and bad qualities, the privations and hardships that the younger doctors have passed through, but nevertheless we have some young physicians who will, in the near future, make their names famous in the medical world. Among these are: N. L. McLachlan, H. V. Beardsley, Don. C. Hughes, J. P. Baker, W. S. Vanhorn, Ralph W. Vanhorn, J. M. Guise, P. O. Guise, I. N. Treece, W. M. Johnston, R. E. Brake, Alfred W. Balsley, O. H. Saunders, Don Biggs, Theron S. Wilson, J. C. Tritch, M. J. Ewing, W. C. Neibling, F. W. Rodgers, J. E. Powell, J. M. Firmin, H. L.

Babcock, J. M. Shepard, C. W. Benedict, M. M. Carrothers. W. W. Drake, F. B. Entrikin, W. B. Keator, R. B. Keeran, A. H. Linaweaver, J. R. McLeod, J. C. Martin, H. A. Vickers, T. E. Woods, W. N. Yost, Mrs. Nelia B. Kennedy and Alice K. Koogle.

CHAPTER XX.

THE BANKS.

THE FIRST NATIONAL BANK.

Findlay is noted as a city of progressive and safe institutions, but of all these none stand more high in the regard of the community at large throughout this section of Ohio, than "the old bank" the First National. No other bank in Northwestern Ohio outside of the city of Toledo has ever exceeded the million mark in total assets. This is a record with which no other financial institution in the city can compare.

The costly improvements recently made in the banking room and still in course of construction, are a source of universal comment, and once again brings the bank to the fore as having the finest bank furniture of any bank in Northwestern Ohio, excepting none. This new furniture is complete throughout. It is of the most modern design, made of golden oak, quarter-sawed, and solid brass, together with plate glass and marble. The business transactions of the institution are transacted in what is really a very elaborate cage, there being a woven brass roof to the department of the cashier. An innovation in Findlay banks, is a special room, luxuriously appointed, for the use of ladies, separating them from the regular run of customers.

The First National was founded in June, 1863, with E. P. Jones as president and Charles E. Niles, cashier. The directors have been James A. Bope, Jacob F. Burket, R. B. Hurd, Henry Brown, H. P. Gage, James H. Wilson, George W. Kimmell, G. P. Jones, Anson Hurd, W. H. Wheeler, M. E. Jones, C. F. M. Niles, C. F. Jones and James A. Blair, the latter now a millionaire banker in New York city.

Mr. Jones was formerly clerk in the postoffice at Sandusky, and later was appointed agent of the Mad River railroad in Findlay, a position which he filled for many years, and at the same time engaged extensively in the grain business. He was a natural financier and his keen business ability brought him rapidly to the front.

Mr. Niles received his first banking education in 1852 in the State bank of Ohio at Ashtabula, commencing at the ground floor, at the foot of the ladder. He has worked his way up until he is considered one of the solid and level-headed bankers of Ohio. He has filled the positions of vice-president and president of the Ohio Bankers' association, and has held many responsible fiduciary offices during the past forty years.

Mr. E. P. Jones' death in 1894 caused the first change in the officers of the bank since it had been founded thirty years before. Mr. Niles succeeded to the presidency, and George P. Jones, son of the bank's first president, became its cashier, a place that he has ably filled. Mr. Jones received his education primarily at Eastman's business college in Poughkeepsie, N. Y., but for over ten years before assuming the position of cashier he rubbed elbows with his father and Mr. Niles, two of the finest financiers in Ohio, and from them gained an invaluable knowledge of the banking business. Both Mr. Niles and Mr. Jones continue in active service in the bank, none of the employes of the institution putting in more arduous hours than they.

The first furniture was that just recently succeeded by the handsome new equipment. It was of massive black walnut and plate glass, and was one of the sights of the town for many years.

The bank is just beginning the third period of its long career. From 1863 to 1892, the first period, the bank issued no higher than $5 bills; in the second period, to 1902, $5s, $10s and $20s were issued; and now at the beginning of its third period, the bank is issuing its banknotes for $50 and $100. One of the interesting relics of the institution is the old ledger, with which business was first opened in 1863. The capital stock of this bank, paid up, is $150,000. Surplus and undivided profits, $31,100, and individual deposits, $874,500.

The same course that has been pursued for forty years is still the guiding star of the bank, and is bearing it ever upward and onward. The First National is always safe, always conservative, and is the largest and strongest bank not only in Findlay, but, with the single exception of Toledo, in all this part of Ohio.

THE FARMER'S NATIONAL BANK.

The Farmer's National bank of Findlay, Ohio, No. 3477, was organized in 1886, its charter being granted March 30 of that year. It had for its first president Milton Gray, now deceased; then William Marvin, one of our present prominent business men, and now Judson Palmer, one of the most prominent business men of the county. This bank has succeeded wonderfully well, and under the present officials, Judson Palmer, president; John A. Scott, vice-president, and Ralph W. Moore, cashier, bids fair to be as firm and staple as the men who have charge of the management. It has a capital stock of $100,000 paid up, a large amount of undivided profits, and individual deposits of $517,000. It deals in foreign and domestic exchange, receives deposits, has a savings department system, a safe lock combination for the benefit of depositors, and to all intents and purposes is all that the name implies, a farmers' bank.

THE AMERICAN NATIONAL BANK.

The American National bank, organized June 29, 1887, is among the financial institutions of Findlay and occupies a high rank among the business world in this community. This institution withstood the financial panic of 1893, and paid all demands made on it, whether due or not, and established for itself a reputation that older banks might well be proud of. The business of the bank covers every line that properly belongs to banking; deposits are received, money loaned at low rates, drafts issued on Europe and other foreign countries, and letters of credit procured for travelers. Merchants, manufacturers, farmers and oil producers in large numbers do their business with this institution, where, an account once opened, is rarely changed. The officers who so magnificently engineer this financial institution are: Jacob F. Burket, president; Harlan F. Burket, vice-president; Louis W. Eoff, cashier, and Arthur E. Eoff, assistant cashier. This institution has paid up stock of $100,000, undivided profits of $13,871.73, and deposits to the amount of $812 899.60.

THE CITY BANKING COMPANY.

The City Banking company, was incorporated November 6, 1897, and commenced business December 4, 1897, succeeded to the business of The City Bank of Findlay a, private bank organized by Peter Hosler and associates on May 1, 1887, which bank has held an honorable position in the financial affairs of Findlay during the entire term of its existence. Mr. N. M. Adams, the president, and also treasurer of the Adams Bros.' company, is a man of large experience in business and thoroughly in touch with the business world. Mr. D. H. Heistand, vice-president, is a man of large means, a successful oil producer and a progressive business man. W. F. Hosler, the cashier, has been identified with the banking interest of Findlay for the past twenty years, and by diligence, prudence and square dealing, has built up an enviable reputation. The paid up capital stock of this bank is $55,000, and the individual deposits amount to $468,000.

THE COMMERCIAL BANK AND SAVINGS COMPANY.

The Commercial Bank and Savings company, organized and incorporated November 10, 1900, and commenced business February 20, 1901, has made a remarkable stride towards breaking the record as a bank progressing and advancing in the financial world as a meteor sails through the skies, passing all other bodies in velocity. This bank, within two years, under the able management of Mr. E. C. Taylor, president; John B. Heimhofer, vice president; C. J. Oller, cashier, and W. J. Creighton, secretary-treasurer, has built up such a vast trade that on a capital stock paid in of $40,000, they have increased their deposits in this short time to the vast amount of $437,000, although the authorized capital of $80,000 was only one-half paid up. Surely this bank will in the course of a few years, at the pace already traveled, lead the banking business in this city.

Beside the banks already mentioned we have the People's Bank of McComb and the Mechanics' Bank of Arlington, which have been established as private banks, but which are a great benefit to the farmers, merchants and other business interests in their locality.

CHAPTER XXI.

LABOR ORGANIZATIONS.

Labor day was celebrated first in New York city. The celebration took place there Monday, September 4, 1882. That day had been chosen by the Central Labor Union of the metropolis as a voluntary labor holiday, on which organized workingmen were requested to drop their employments, and after displaying their organized strength in a public parade, to make of the day a festival time. The New York Central Labor Union, the first of its kind, had been but recently formed and the Labor Day experiment was of doubtful promise up to the very hour set for the parade; but in the end the experience proved so successful that the first Monday of September has since been observed in a similar manner by the labor organizations of New York every year. The custom thus begun, speedily spread, until it is now general throughout the United States. Though voluntarily at first, the holiday was soon legalized in the state where it originated, and it is now a legal holiday in thirty-five states and the District of Columbia.

In all communities where two or more labor organizations exist, there is generally a central or delegate body, at the meetings of which the delegates from the different unions discuss measures looking toward the betterment of the wage earners. Where no central body exists, the cause of trade unionism will generally be found on the wane, and the cause of the unfair manufacturer benefited. Where no central body exists, it will be found that the business firms are carrying large stocks of prison, sweat-shop and non-union made goods.

The past history of labor organizations prove that when they have been well conducted they have accomplished great good; but their efforts have not been of a lasting character except where there has been a thorough unification of all the different branches of organized industrial workers in the community. It is merely following the examples set and practiced by capitalists, who organize and unite in one common interest, without regard to nationality, sex, color or creed, for mutual protection against unjust demands by capital? All that the wage-earners at any trade or calling demand is that they receive their just reward and proper and manly treatment from their employers.

The main aim and object of a central body is that a wrong to one branch, lodge or assembly of labor shall be the concern and interest of all organized labor, and through organization and agitation educate and elevate, for all time to come, the producing class, and to secure the recognition of the rights to which they are justly entitled.

It too often happens that an unprincipled employer will cut wages so low that a bare existence is all that his employes receive. As a matter of self-protection, the fair-minded employer is compelled to reduce the wages of his workers to the same scale. Finding that he is again compelled to compete with honorable men, the unprincipled labor crusher will again reduce wages. This is one of the greatest causes of suffering that the workers have to contend with. Through organization the unfair manufacturer and the unfair workman are made to feel that they will receive no sympathy or support, and they will either be driven out of business or be compelled to act justly. The fair-minded employer is protected by thorough organization among the workers of the trade or callings he employs for the reason that he will have to compete with the same wages he pays himself. Labor organizations in Findlay are so numerous that a mere mention of them is all that can be given. This subject alone could be expanded into a large volume, but the necessary time to prepare and collect the material is where I am at present unable to cope with the subject. The following organizations are at present flourishing in this city: Cigar Makers' Union, No. 249, chartered January 11, 1889, J. E. Michnewitsch secretary; Typographical Union, No. 260, chartered June 24, 1890, John E. Hickei secretary; Retail Clerks' Local, No. 5, chartered June 5, 1900, A. F. Risser secretary; Journeymen Barbers' Union, No. 27, chartered January 1, 1902, W. F. Cross, secretary; Journeymen Stone Cutters, chartered October 1, 1900, Abe McKurdy, secretary; Painters and Decorators, No. 843, chartered January 2, 1903, Edward McMillan secretary; Retail Sales-ladies, No. 631, chartered June, 1902; Glass Pot Makers, No. 9553, chartered December 27, 1901, Reuben Reber secretary; Bartenders' Union, No. 141, chartered December 19, 1900, Harry Glick, secretary; Hotel and Restaurant Employes, No. 596, chartered April 9, 1903, E. G. Yates secretary; A. A. of I. S. & T. W. Union, No. 62, George Marsh secretary; A. F. G. W. Union, No. 74, Harry McMorris secretary; J. B. A. C. I., No. 137, Jacob Aberhard secretary; O. & G. W. Union, No. 9, T. C. Kelley secretary; Snappers' Union, No. 8824, Joseph Geer, secretary; J. H. Shoers, No. 130, Edward Bock, secretary; Electrical Workers, O. Doosnell secretary; Lehr Tenders, No. 8826, Samuel Thomas secretary; Carpenters and Joiners, No. 822, M. A. Doyle secretary; Laundry Workers, No. 93, E. Anderson, secretary; Team Drivers, No. 321, E. Forney, secretary; Blacksmiths, No. 235, Charles Holley, secretary; Glass Workers, L. A. 300, K. of L., Chas. Breitigan secretary; Bricklayers, A. B. Simms secretary; Union Brewery Workers, No. 60, Charles Dietsch secretary; Operative Plasterers, No. 248, J. J. Anderson secretary; Medicine Workers, No. 9702, J. E. Michnewitsch secretary; Woman's International Union, Label League, No. 40, Julia Michnewitsch secretary; Tobacco Workers' International Union, George Nemeyer secretary.

This list is not as complete as the writer had wished for, but as these organizations have their meetings at so many different localities, it was almost impossible to obtain all the information that the writer wished for.

DR. JOSEPH MICHNEWITSCH.

ORGANIZER.

Few men are better known to laboring men, in fact to people of all classes and walks in life, than Joseph Michnewitsch, of No. 826 Adams street, Findlay, Ohio. Mr. Michnewitsch was born in Germany on the 19th of September, 1855. At the age of seven he came to America with his parents and while in his early teens secured employment in a cigar factory at Edwardsville, Illinois. He soon became a full-fledged cigar maker and became identified as a union workman, and has taken active part in affairs of unionism ever since. He was a prime mover in the organization of numerous unions, among them the Cigar Makers' Union of Findlay, and as a delegate to the Trades and Labor Assembly he stands first and foremost in its councils. For a number of years he held a state organizers' commission, but his untiring efforts in the great work came to the attention of the national officers of the American Federation, his field was extended and he now holds a national organizers' commission. Mr. Michnewitsch was the organizer of the first Medicine Workers' Union in the world, which was organized at Findlay. It was by him and at this place that the union label on medicines first originated. Mr. Michnewitsch is an agreeable and affable gentleman, and through his manly efforts and treatment of people in handling his favorite German remedies, Wild Cherry Tree Tonic Bitters, has made hosts of friends throughout the northwest.

Dr. Joseph Michnewitsch.

CHAPTER XXII.

HANCOCK COUNTY SCHOOLS.

Education is one of the most powerful factors in molding the future of every community, and without it man is not far removed from the brute creation. An intelligent, well educated, moral man or woman is the highest example of an enlightened civilization, but even a limited education is a wonderful stepping stone in the battle of life. The pioneers recognized this fact, and, though generally uneducated themselves, took advantage of every legitimate means to educate their children, as the first public building we find erected in every village or settlement was invariably the little log school house.

In the early development of Hancock county a great variety of influences was felt in the way of general education. The settlements were and for years continued to be sparse. The people, as the pioneers of all new counties are, were poor, and lacked the means of remunerating teachers. Their poverty compelled all who were able to labor, and the work of the females was as important and toilsome as that of the men. Added to these, both teachers and books were scarce. This condition of things continued perhaps for more than a quarter of a century. Taking these facts into consideration it is surprising that they had any schools whatever. It was not uncommon for children to trudge through the snow-covered forest from two to four miles before reaching the little log school house. And though the great majority of the pioneers of Hancock county embraced every opportunity to educate their children, there were some who cared little for educational matters, only thinking of rearing their sons to shoot and trap successfully, and their daughters to spin and weave, but not to read or write.

The interest awakened in literature and science immediately after the Revolution followed the pioneers to their western homes; but to make their efforts productive of useful results time became absolutely necessary. Just as soon as the settlements were prepared for the experiment, schools were opened, but at every step it was the acquisition of knowledge under difficulties. Everything connected with them was as simple and primitive as were their dwellings, food and clothing. Houses were built in the various neighborhoods as occasion made necessary, not by subscription in money, but by labor. On a given day the neighbors assembled at some place previously agreed upon, and the work was done. Timber was abundant; they were skilled in the use of the ax, and having cut logs of the required length, the walls were soon raised. The roof was made of clapboards, kept in place by heavy poles reaching the length of the building. The door was of clapboards and creaked on wooden hinges; the latch of wood and raised by a string. The floor was "puncheon," or trees split in the middle, the edge and face being dressed with the ax. The crevices between the logs forming the walls were filled with "chinks" or split sticks of wood, and daubed with mud. The fireplace was equally rude, but of ample dimensions, built on the outside of the house, usually of stone to the throat of the flue, and the remainder of the chimney of split sticks of wood, daubed with puddled clay within and without. Light was admitted through the door and by means of an opening made by cutting out one of the logs, reaching almost the entire width of the building. This opening was high enough from the floor to prevent the boys from looking out, and in winter was covered with paper saturated with grease to keep out the cold, as well as to admit light.

In the rural districts school "kept" only in winter. The furniture corresponded with the simplicity of the house. At a proper distance below the windows augur holes were bored in a slanting direction in one of the logs, and in these strong wooden pins were driven, and on the pins a huge slab or puncheon was placed which served as a writing desk for the whole school. For seats they used the puncheon, or, more commonly, the body of a smooth, straight tree, cut ten to twelve feet in length, and raised to a height of twelve to fifteen inches by means of pins securely inserted. The pupils sat with their faces toward the wall, around the room, while the teacher occupied the middle space to superintend each pupil separately. In some rooms a separate bench was furnished for those too young to write.

The books were as primitive as the surroundings. The New Testament was a common reading book; the "English Reader" was occasionally found, and sometimes the "Columbian Orator." No one book was common in all the families. The reading class recited paragraphs alternately, and the book in use was made common property, passing from hand to hand during recitation. It was not unusual for the teacher to assist a pupil in one of his "sums," discipline a refractory scholar, and hear the reading class at the same time. Dabold's, Smiley's and Pike's arithmetics were commonly used, with the examples for practice almost exclusively in pounds, shillings and pence, and a marked absence of clear rules and definitions for the solving of the different divisions. Webster's "American Speller" was the ordinary spelling book, which afterward made way for Webster's "Elementary Speller." This latter book maintained its popularity for half a century. The spelling class closed the labors of the day. All who could spell entered the "big class," and the rivalry was sharp as to who should rank first as good spellers. The class was numbered in the order in which they stood in line, and retained the number until a misspelled word sent some one above them. Spelling matches were frequent, and contributed largely to make good spellers. Grammar was not often taught, partly for the reason that books were hard to get, and partly because some of the teachers were not proficient in this branch of learning. When the science was taught the text-book was Kirkham, which, though of little real merit, stimulated a taste for grammar.

The schools were supported by subscription, the charge being from $1 to $3 per term of three months during the winter, to begin at 8 o'clock in the morning with an hour to an hour and a half intermission at noon, and close at 5 o'clock. One half of Saturdays, or alternate Saturdays, made part of the term. Writing was taught to all the larger pupils, and the only pen used was the goose or turkey quill, made into a pen by the skillful hand of the teacher or parent. Mending the pens was an essential part of the work of the teacher. Copy books were made of sheets of fools-cap paper stitched together, and copies were "set" by the teacher during recess, which were commonly taken from the maxims in use from time immemorial. Sometimes the teacher was partly paid in produce or other commodities, which were the equivalent to him for money, while his support was often obtained by boarding around among the parents of the pupils.

The introduction of schools in one settlement was an incentive to their speedy adoption in others, and the foregoing description applies to all of the earlier schools and school houses of Hancock county. The erection of saw mills and the opening up of wagon roads brought about a better order of things, and plank, weather-boarding and glass took the places of clapboards, puncheon floors and desks, log benches and greased paper windows. The pioneer schools opened in the different townships of this county will be found fully spoken of in the following part of this chapter.

The first school house in Allen township was a small log structure built in 1836 on the section line immediately west of the present building on the farm of Isaac Whetstone. It stood in the center of the road now occupying the section line between 13 and 14, and was built of round logs, covered with a clapboard roof, had greased paper windows and a huge fireplace in one end. The Bryans, Trouts, Burmans, Ensmingers, Barnds, Gilchrists, Warners and Raders attended this school at its first opening.

The first school in Amanda township was held in the winter of 1830-31, in a small log cabin on the farm of Uriah Egbert, and the Georges, Beards, Shoemakers, Moreharts and others were pupils in attendance.

The first school house erected in Biglick township was in 1836, on the farm of George W. Graham, in section 14. The Rollers, Moores, Martins, Hendersons, Grahams, Wilsons, Leonards and others attended this school.

In 1832 the first school in Blanchard township was taught in one end of John Dukes' cabin by Amanda Kilpatrick. The following year a small log school house was built on the farm of Thomas Groves, in section 14, which was opened by John C. Wickham in 1833. It was attended by the Shaws, Dukeses, Groves, Downings, Millhams, Wickhams, Hastings and others.

The first school opened in Cass township was in 1835 by Richard Wade, in a vacated cabin on the farm of John Hardy. It was attended by the Vickers, Hardys, Wagners, Hulburts, Woods, Elliotts, Albertsons, Wards and others. In 1836 a small log school house was erected in the northeast corner of section 11.

The first school opened in Delaware township was in 1829 by John Wolford, in a cabin erected by Robert Elder, on section 11. It was attended by the Hamlins, Greens, Lakes, Hammonds, Wolfords and Elders. In 1830 a small log school house was erected on the farm of John Rose, in section 14, which was opened and taught that year by Joshua Corbin.

The first school house in Eagle township was erected in 1834, on section 24, and Rachel McBride was engaged as the first teacher. The Bishops, Whitmans, Lines, Sharps, Crums and Woodruffs attended this school.

The first school opened in Jackson township was in 1832 by Aquilla Gilbert, in a log building erected in section 13 (Then in Jackson township, now Amanda), for that purpose.

The first school house erected in Liberty township was in 1832, and the first school taught by Richard Wade. This building was erected on the southwest quarter of section 9, and was attended by the McKinnises, Poes, Wilsons, Wades, Hamptons, Hendricks, Fishels, Chases and Coens.

The first school house erected in Madison township was in 1833, on the farm of Abel Tanner, in section 23. The first teacher in this new edifice was Charles Herron.

The first school house erected in Marion township was in 1836, on the farm of William Marvin, in the north part of section 22. Here the first school was taught by Adam Robinson and was attended by the Wickhams, Brights, Wiseleys, Johnsons, Thomases, Egberts, Bakers and Plummers.

The first school house in Orange township was a small log building erected on section 1, in 1837, and a school opened by Elizabeth Matthews. The McKinnleys, Ivers, Burnses, Walls and Ballards, attended this pioneer school.

The first school house in Pleasant township was a small log building erected in 1838 on the site of McComb. This first school was taught by Samuel Bowman. The Todds, Needleases, Kalbs, Blakemans and Prices were the first scholars.

The first school in Portage township was taught by Frederick S. Ankney in the winter of 1836-37. It was held in the wagon shop of Benoni Culp, on section 20, and was attended by the Culps, Coopers, Edgingtons and others. The first school house was built near Pleasant Hill in 1837, being situated in the south part of section 15.

The first school house in Union township was built in the southeast corner of section 2 and a school opened by Rev. Richard Biggs. The Cramers, Falks, Burkets, Foxes, Deedses and Flicks attended this school.

The first school house in Van Buren township was built in 1842, near the north line of section 9, on the farm now owned by Ami H. Heldman.

The first school house in Washington township was built in 1833 on the farm of James Wiseman, in section 12. Isaac Wiseman was the first teacher, and the Gorsuches, Wisemans, Swaneyes, Thomases, McRills, Kelleys, Norrises, and Hunts were the pupils in attendance.

The first school taught in Findlay township was taught by Joseph White in the winter of 1826-27, in a small log cabin east of the Sherman house site. The first school house was built on the northwest corner of East and Crawford streets in 1827.

But despite the fact that under all these difficulties and want of almost every thing intended to render the school life of the pupil not only bearable but attractive much, very much progress was made in the acquirement of a common school education.

A detailed narrative of the gradual advancement of the common schools of this county from the rude manner in which they were carried on in pioneer days up to and including the school facilities we now enjoy cannot be fully dealt with in this small volume, but a comparison of the story already told with the schools as they now exist will give the reader a fair conception of the almost miraculous change in our common school system and the rapid advancement of education. However we cannot forbear from giving a brief outline of the early schools of Findlay as related by Mr. Warner in his history of 1886, which is as follows:

"In 1827 a one-story hewed-log school house eighteen feet square was built on the northwest corner of Crawford and East streets on lot 141, donated by Vance and Cory for that purpose, and here a school was opened by John C. Wickham in the winter of 1827-28. This old log building was used about eight or nine years. The building was utilized for various purposes, such as school house, court house, church and private residence, and seems to have been admirably adapted to the wants of the struggling settlers. About 1839-40 it was sold to Abraham Daughenbaugh, who moved it to the rear of Henderson's store, where it stood for several years.

"In 1836 a school was taught in the court house by Charles W. O'Neal and Miss Sarah Eldridge, and in 1837, 1838 and 1839 school was held in the same building. The whole village then composed one school district of Findlay township, and the directors paid to the county at the rate of $20 per annum for the use of a room in the court house. Miss Sarah A. Baldwin taught in the public schools of the village about this time, and also some years afterward as Mrs. Merriam. In 1839 George Patterson taught in a room on the east side of Main street immediately north of Sandusky street. Alexander Adair taught in the old Methodist church on Main-Cross street about 1840, while the old Presbyterian church on Crawford street was occupied for a public school in 1839-40, with Daniel Woodward and John Sours as the teachers in charge. In 1840 a two-story frame of four rooms was built upon the same lot on Crawford street, where the log school house formerly stood, by Abraham Daughenbaugh and Jonathan Parker, which was opened in the winter of 1840-41. This was used for some six or seven years, and for reasons now forgotten was then abandoned.

"A few years after the frame on Crawford street was built, Alexander Adair put up a building on Sandusky street, and opened a private school. In 1847-48 the academy occupied this building, and it was subsequently utilized by the public schools. It was small and inconvenient and, to increase its seating capacity, a gallery was built along the south and west sides. The Rummell block now stands upon the site of this old school house.

"In the meantime the village had been divided into three or four districts, but upon the abandonment of the old frame school house on Crawford street, which all had previously patronized, none of the districts possessed a separate building. A school was then opened in the rear part of Jonathan Parker's frame, which stood on the site of Patterson's block, and taught by Mr. Lowry, who was succeeded by Miss Mary Vail and John Bowman. The children of District No. 9 attended this school, until the erection of the brick on Hardin street. In 1850 a proposition was submitted to the voters of the town to organize the schools under the graded system, and to repair and re-occupy the old building on Crawford street which had been vacant for several years, and fast going to ruin, but the scheme was defeated. District No. 9 then decided to organize under the Akron school law, and erect a schoolhouse in that district. On February 24, 1851, the directors of No. 9 purchased of John B. Hull, Lot No. 54 on West Hardin street, built a brick schoolhouse of two rooms, and opened a two-teacher school in the fall of that year, with James Hayes and wife in charge. Two years afterwards, the Union School District was organized, but No. 9 refused to become a part thereof. School was held in the Hardin street building for thirteen years, and it is now the home of Julia A. Parker. In the spring of 1864 the directors of No. 9 bought an acre of ground on West Lincoln street of D. J. Cory, and built a large two-story brick of four rooms, which was completed and opened October 5 of that year, with J. S. VanHorn as superintendent. His successors have been Wallace Taylor, F. H. Tufts, A. G. Crouse, C. N. Vancleve, J. N. Doty and C. B. Metcalf. In 1870 a mansard roof was put on, furnishing the building with a good hall, while the heating apparatus in the basement heats the entire building. The entire cost of the building, furniture and site was about $20,000. In 1888, Honorable James A. Bope, on behalf of the State of Ohio, began "Quo Warranto" proceedings against the No. 9 District in the Circuit Court of Hancock county, and on April 27, 1889, the Circuit Court rendered their decision in favor of the plaintiff. The case was then appealed to the supreme court of the state, and about two years later this court rendered their decision confirming the decision of the lower court. Thus it was that the No. 9 District was ousted and the entire city united into one district.

Under the act of March 14, 1853, the Union School District was organized, and a board of education consisting of Parlee Carlin, Ezra Brown and N. Y. Mefford was elected. In October, 1853, the board divided the district into three sub-districts, viz: 1, 2 and 4, which embraced all of the village except that portion included in the independent district No. 9. The schools opened under the new regime in the fall of 1853, in the old Methodist church on East Main Cross street, and the little brick schoolhouse on Front street, which was erected on lot 45, in the year 1851, and this term lasted four months. The two-story frame schoolhouse on Crawford street, which by agreement had become the property of the Union district, was in a badly wrecked condition, and considerable repairing was necessary before it could be occupied. In 1854, the building was repaired and fitted up by the board, several hundred dollars being expended upon it, and in the fall of that year, the schools took possession. Alonzo L. Kimber was appointed superintendent of the Union district at a salary of $35 per month. John Bowman was assigned to the Front street building at $28 per month, and Mrs. Malinda Vance and Miss Martha J. Powell were engaged as assistants at $22 per month each. The schools kept open for seven months in 1854-5, and the following year the full term of ten months was adopted. The schools were now on the road to success, and it was only a question of time when they would attain a high degree of efficiency.

Central Building.

In May, 1860, the board decided to establish a primary school in North Findlay, and the following July, lot 13, in Taylor's Addition, was purchased, upon which a small brick building was erected, at a cost of $650, and occupied in the fall of the same year.

The time had now arrived when the Union schools demanded better accommodations. But the board concluded to first try and unite the whole town under the Union school system, and in 1865 the authorities of District No. 9 were approached on the subject. That district again refused to unite, and replied that the people of No. 9 district possessed good schools, and ample accommodations, and had no desire to enter the Union district. In September, 1865, the electors of the Union district, by a vote of 156 to 63, authorized the board to purchase a site and erect a two-story brick building, estimated to cost $18,000. June 28, 1866, a plat of ground, then known as "The Park," located on East

Sandusky street, was purchased for the sum of $2,000, and the foundation constructed during the following autumn. Early in 1867, the work was pushed vigorously, but in August the plans were so changed as to include another story, wherein a fine exhibition hall is located, and in September, 1868, the structure was completed and occupied by the Union schools. George W. Myers, George W. Galloway and James Harsh were the board under whose administration the building was erected. It is a massive three-story brick, with a fine basement and a mansard roof, and, including the heating apparatus and furniture, cost about $36,000. Two towers, each ninety-one feet in height, grace the front of the building, which it is claimed will accommodate 500 pupils. It was known as the "High School Building" until the erection of our new high school building, since which time it is designated as the central building.

The increase in population of Findlay, owing to the development of oil and gas, caused numerous buildings besides those mentioned to be constructed, and since 1885 the number of school buildings has increased from four to thirteen, not including the new high school building nor Findlay College.

Findlay College, among the most recent additions to the schools of Findlay, is among the leading educational institutions of Ohio. While the establishment of a college, under the auspices of the "church of God," had been in contemplation for many years, the initial movement looking to that end took definite shape in a resolution introduced at the general eldership held at Findlay in 1881. That body authorized the committee on education to take the proper steps to form an incorporation, and to select a location for the proposed institution. Findlay was selected as the most appropriate site for the college, and on January 23, 1882, articles of incorporation were filed with the Secretary of State, "Findlay College" being the name adopted. The incorporators were Jeremiah M. Carvell, Robert L. Byrnes, Isaac Schrader, Tobias Koogle, Jacob M. Cassel, Anderson C. Heck, John C. Strickler and George F. Pendleton, the four last mentioned being citizens of Hancock county. February 8, 1882, the articles of incorporation were signed, and the board of trustees organized by electing Isaac Frazer, President; Eli G. DeWolfe, Secretary and E. P. Jones, Treasurer. The first annual meeting of the board was held at Findlay June 21, 1882, when a permanent organization was effected.

The site selected for the proposed institution was a ten-acre tract lying about one mile north of the court house, situated on the west side of Main street, and surrounded on all sides by streets 50 feet in width. This ground was deeded to the Findlay College, July 23, 1882, by Samuel Howard and others; the same being paid for by private donations from the people living on the north side. On October 18, 1882, the board met for the purpose of considering plans for a college building, when those submitted by Mr. M. Rumbaugh were accepted. The architect was directed to prepare complete plans and specifications, and sealed proposals for the erection of said building were ordered to be advertised for. March 6, 1883, the bids were opened, but none were accepted, for the reason that they were not within the $50,000 limit which the board by previous resolution had fixed. The contract was finally let June 20, 1883, to Pierce & Coleman for the sum of $49,000, to be finished according to the plans and specifications. The work was soon afterwards commenced, and on Sunday, the 25th day of May, 1884, the corner-stone was laid with imposing ceremonies, in the presence of a very large assemblage. The college was not completed until late in the year 1886, but notwithstanding this fact the college was opened Wednesday, September 1, 1886, with very appropriate ceremony, and started off with nearly one hundred pupils enrolled. This edifice of education is now considered one of the finest in the state, and is fully equipped, and when completed ready for business cost about $65,000. Under the present management of Rev. Charles Manchester, bids fair to excel any institution of its kind in the state.

The New High School Building had its birth October 18, 1899, when E. C. Miller, N. M. Adams, Ed. Dietsch, Charles A. Ebling, Timothy Fellers, T. F. Gillespie, F. W. Karg, W. W. Shuler, A. W. Brown and Alvin S. Thomas, members of the board of education of Findlay, passed a resolution to hold an election on November 17, 1899, at the assembly room, to decide the question of levying a tax of \$50,000 to purchase a site and erect a high school building. The vote resulted as follows: For high school building, 1,131; against high school building, 446. January 23, 1900, on the seventh ballot, the board decided on West Main Cross street as the site, by a vote of 9 to 5, and ordered the advertisement of bond sale to take place March 1, 1900; said bonds to bear interest at the rate of 4 per cent., payable semi-annually. At the same meeting, the board accepted the offer of Sarah F. and Foster H. Geyer for lots 41, 42 and E. $\frac{1}{2}$ of 43 at \$7,500; the W $\frac{1}{2}$ of 43 of heirs of Elizabeth Snyder at \$1,500, and 44 of Minerva Snyder at \$3,500, possession to be given not later than March 1, 1900. Kramer and Harpster were employed as architects on January 26, 1900, and at the same session a resolution was adopted, offering \$25,000 of the bonds to the city at par; also a resolution to advertise for bids for heating said building, to be received until noon March 5, 1900. The city council, at its session held

New High School Building.

February 7, 1900, accepted the offer of the board of education on the $25,000 worth of bonds, and ordered the same to be purchased out of the Gas Bond Redemption Fund, which acceptance was received and adopted by the board February 16, 1900. At this meeting the plans and specifications of Kramer and Harpster were presented and adopted. On March 5, 1900, the bids for the heating plant were opened and examined, and after various exchanges of oratory of various members of the board, which lasted for four sessions, nothing was done until March 30, when all bids heretofore received were rejected. April 6, 1900, the board of education passed a resolution to advertise for bids for the erection of the new high school building, said bids to be received up to noon of May 11, 1900. On said date the bids were opened and examined, and upon due consideration, the contracts were awarded May 22, as follows: George J. Horn, for excavation, sewers, stone mason work, brick work, plumbing, carpenter work, painting and glazing, structural iron work and electrical work, $30,630; J. J. Duttwiler, galvanized iron roofing, curb stone work and plastering, $5,900; total $36,530. At the meeting of the board of education held May 25, 1900, the building and grounds committee reported the refusal of Mr. Duttwiler to enter into contract, and the board ordered the entire contract to be awarded to F. Wentz & Co., of Canal Dover, Ohio, for $38,295, which award was accepted by F. Wentz & Co., and on June 1, 1900, entered into contract and gave bond for $20,000.

June 8, 1900, the contract for heating and ventilating was let to U. K. Stringfellow for B. T. Sturtevant Co., for $6,425, and the contract was entered into and bond given June 22. August 17, 1900, the bids for the second $25,000 bonds were opened, and the bonds awarded to the Croghan bank of Fremont, Ohio, for $25,085, and accrued interest. The building progressed slowly and the final amount was paid to the contractor August 23, 1901; the city board reserving $500 until the building was accepted. This amount was not paid until March 6, 1903, which formally accepted the building. The entire cost of the building under the contract was $38,481.23; of this amount, $186.23 was extras caused by changes in the original plans. The furniture cost $2,620.50, and the curb, driveways and walks put in by C. B. Metcalf, cost $675, making the entire cost of the building ready for occupancy, including grounds, $54,276.73.

August 31, 1901, Findlay accepted the beautiful new high school building as its own. Built for the public of today and for posterity in the years to come. The dedicatory services were opened by a grand chorus of "America," participated in by the entire audience. Rev. Manchester invoked the divine blessing. Speeches appropriate for the occasion were delivered by various persons of renown, among whom was the Hon. Mr. Bonebrake, State Commissioner of Common Schools. The school opened on Monday, September 2, 1901, with a large attendance of pupils, and from all indications Findlay high school bids fair to equal any of its character in this grand state of ours. Here education, the foundation of our civilization, receives its finishing touches and starts the pupils on the highway to success.

CHAPTER XXIII.

HANCOCK COUNTY CHURCHES.

Not alone to the blazing of roads and the making of homes, or the building of mills and the establishing of industries, did our hardy ancestors devote themselves, for they forgot not the hand that gave the increase and Him from whom all blessings flow. When six days of incessant toil had exhausted the hardiest, they sought refreshment at the fountain of life, and drank deep from its life-giving sweetness. Though at first their only tabernacle was the friendly shade of the primeval forest to shield them from the heat of a summer sun, or their own rude cabins from the winter's blast, they were happy, and enjoyed the blessings of their religion, and the prosperity that always attend the efforts of a God-fearing people.

Although sectarianism prevented as mutual a feeling among the various denominations then, as now exist, still many are the stories told of religious services held in cabins and great camp meetings, where all were welcome, and where all joined.

In nearly every community, those of a particular belief, and as many as they could get to join with them, would hold meetings from house to house, until able to erect a building suitable to the times and the community; usually these churches were of hewed logs, with the cracks carefully chinked and daubed, lathed with split lath and plastered with mortar made from home-burned lime.

While now nearly every denomination and sect have representatives in Hancock county, in the early days, they were principally methodist, presbyterian, baptist or lutheran.

The methodist were the first to hold regular meetings in our county, and as early as 1832 her hardy itinerants came both teaching and preaching, and are still in the ascendancy. The first church in Hancock county was organized at the home of John Dukes in Blanchard township, and a church built in 1831, and is still known as "The Duke's Church." A comfortable brick structure now marks the site of the old log one. The first preacher in Hancock county was James Gilruth, who came to Findlay in 1822. He was a methodist itinerant, and did not stay long. Several years later Rev. Adam Poe held regular services in the old log schoolhouse; he was followed by several others. No regular organization was made till 1832, with Revs. Elam Day and Benjamin Allen in charge, and known as Fort Findlay Mission. The mission was prosperous, and the first methodist church in Findlay was built on West Main Cross street in 1833. In 1851 they purchased their present site where now stands the third building for this location, an elegant stone structure fronting on Sandusky street, a beauty spot in the city, and a credit to the present pastor, the Rev. Dr. C. R. Havighorst and his congregation. During the boom, when Findlay began to spread herself, the methodists erected a very comfortable brick structure on the north side and known as the Howard M. E. Besides these the methodists have many churches located in all parts of the county, hardly a township but what is blessed with one or more of her organizations, there being some twenty-three methodist societies in the county; these, by combining two or three small churches together, are able to support a preacher in a becoming manner.

View of the New Methodist Church.

Next in importance and affluence is the presbyterian church. The first presbyterian preacher was Rev. Barr, who came here in 1829, and organized a bible society, with Wilson Vance, Edwin S. Jones and John C. Wickham as directors. These men, assisted by others, kept the organization up, and held regular meetings until the regular organization of the First Presbyterian Church in 1831, by the Rev. Peter Monfort, at the home of Wilson Vance. Rev. Monfort continued to preach for them until 1835, when Rev. Geo. Van Eman became the first settled pastor of the church.

Her growth was steady, and in accordance with the growth of the village. In 1842 Rev. R. H. Hollyday became pastor, and ably filled that place for 12 years. Rev. Hollyday is a grand old servant of the Master, the oldest preacher in the city, and still resides on East Crawford street, just west of the property known as the old oil mill now occupied by the Buckeye Steam Laundry, and where the presbyterian church formerly stood.

Rev. Hollyday was followed by Rev. J. A. Meeks, who was well liked, and at his retirement, after ten years' service, in 1865, a dissension arose which became so violent that about 45 members withdrew and organized the First Congregational Church of Findlay, with Rev. Meeks as their pastor. They built a comfortable brick structure just west of the court house. The building is now used as a Salvation Army barracks, the original congregation having almost entirely disappeared.

The First Presbyterian Church is now located on the corner of Main and Lincoln streets, being an elegant stone structure of modern architecture, and modern equipment, and presided over by the Rev. John Montgomery, a noble man, and an earnest and eloquent preacher.

The Second Presbyterian Church, on the north side of our city, is in a healthy and thriving condition, presided over by Rev. J. T. Sullivan.

There are about seven presbyterian churches in the county, most of them founded at an early date, and whose early history when they were builded of hewn logs would be intensely interesting.

First English Lutheran Church.

The Lutheran church was the third organization to permanently locate in Hancock county, beginning irregular services in 1839, but no permanent organization till 1846. They were first located on West Crawford street, where a comfortable house was built in 1847, where they continued to worship till 1882, when they removed to their present commodious building on the corner of Lincoln and Main streets, the site for which had been purchased in 1869. Under the pastorate of Rev. S. E. Greenawalt, the influence of the church has been largely extended, and the house itself improved and beautified. Rev. Greenawalt will always remain in memory of the people of Findlay as one of the polished gentlemen, and universally beloved pastor of the church. There are other Lutheran churches of the reformed faith in the county. The Trinity church on the north side being quite a stronghold for lutherans, and doing good service for the Master.

The German Evangelical Lutheran Church, was organized in 1858, and built their church on West Front street, which they occupied about 1863. They still have a flourishing society of the German speaking folk of our city. The German Reformed church is located on East Main Cross street.

The United Brethren Church of Findlay, was organized about 1853. They erected a small building on West Crawford street in 1855, but have been prosperous, and at present occupy a modern edifice on West Hardin street.

St. Michael's Catholic Church was organized in 1851, and built a small frame church on the corner of Cory and Hardin streets, although occasional services had been held here since 1840. In 1866 the frame building burned down, also the parish school building adjoining, and since the membership had largely increased, more ground was needed. Louis Adams donated the present site on West Main Cross street. The present building was completed 1867, though it has been much improved and enlarged since. The parish school is located just west of the church and is ably presided over by a competent corps of teachers.

There are very few catholic churches in Hancock county, although there are some very strong organizations in the surrounding counties.

The First Baptist Church was organized in 1857. They did not build a church for many years, and for several years no services were held; they now have a comfortable building on East Lima street.

The Dunkards have no church in the city, but several organizations exist in the county, especially in the eastern part.

The Trinity Episcopal Church was organized in 1881, and now have a handsome, though moderate, structure on Hardin street, just opposite the U. B. church.

The Church of Christ, better known as disciples, organized in 1884, and built a very commodious structure on North Main street. They have a large membership, and have had several able pastors, the most notable being Rev. Adams, since famous as the senior member of the "Adams and Sarber Oil Company."

The Evangelical Association was organized in 1870, with the Rev. E. B. Crouse in charge, and a brick building erected on East Sandusky street. A split occurring in the general church, extended to Findlay, and caused the building of another church on West Sandusky street. There are several societies in the county which take one side or the other of the quarrel, so the church is still divided into two factions.

The Church of God have had organizations in the county since 1848, but they did not get very strong numerically until quite a late date; getting their main impetus from the location of their college here in 1881, which greatly increased interest in that organization. The First Church of God on West Front street, is a strong organization, and they have a very commodious as well as handsome building. The college church meet in the college chapel and are usually presided over by some of the college faculty.

The Christian Union denomination is quite numerous, but have no organization in the city. They had their origin during the civil war over the question of slavery.

There are other denominations both in and out of Findlay which we would like to notice, but suffice it to say that all are laboring for one common cause, the salvation of immortal souls through the blood of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. This common purpose is being realized more and more. Sectarian lines are disappearing and the bitterness and strife which marked the intercourse of churches in the past have entirely disappeared, and the churches of our county meet in union services, conventions and picnics.

The ministers themselves are going out into the world to influence men to a better life, upon the common "Brotherhood of the Blood of Jesus." And no more do they impress the sinner that they are using the methodist, the presbyterian, or baptist methods, but the gospel of increased light and truth, tempered with Christian love and charity.

CHAPTER XXIV.

THE GRAND ARMY.

The first Grand Army Post in Hancock county, and among the first in northwestern Ohio, was organized at Findlay in 1867. It began with a membership of about fifty. The following were its commanders in the order named: James A. Bope, William Vance, E. T. Dunn, M. B. Walker. This post surrendered its charter in 1871.

Stoker Post, Grand Army of the Republic, Department of Ohio, was organized April 7, 1881. It was named in memory of Cyrus and David Stoker, members of Co. F, 21st Ohio Volunteer Infantry, who were both killed in the battle of Stone River in January, 1862. The following named ex-soldiers were charter members:

Col. William Mungen	S. Howard
J. M. Huber	Wm. Didway
J. A. Kimmel	H. D. Taylor
C. E. Galloway	C. P. Vail
J. M. Beelman	Thos. B. Scott
Rufus Feller	J. A. Coons
L. H. Perry	J. W. Whitehurst
D. Joy	M. L. Detwiler
J. W. Davis	R. L. Pollock
Wm. Biggs	H. H. Metzler
John Adams	M. L. Tisdale
T. C. Werts	Elisha Edwards
J. C. Cummins	R. Timmerman
J. M. Cherry	E. Parker
John Peet	Jos. P. Gutzwiler.
J. W. Davidson

The first commander was M. L. Detwiler; Senior Vice-Commander, R. F. Pollock; Junior Vice-Commander, H. H. Metzler; Adjutant, J. M. Beelman; Quartermaster, C. E. Galloway; Surgeon, J. A. Kimmel; Chaplain, Wm. Mungen; Officer of the Day, L. H. Perry; Officer of the Guard, Wm. Biggs; Sergeant Major, T. C. Wertz; Q. M. Sergeant, Rufus Fellers.

The commanders of the post, from its organization to this date (May, 1903), were: M. L. Detwiler, H. H. Metzler, James Wilson, Geo. L. Arnold, Uriah H. Grable, James A. Bope, John A. Thomas, William J. Morrison, Newton J.

Adams, Theodore Totten, John Bolton, Solomon Funk, Bartholomew L. Byal, Cyrus C. Clark, Minott D. Hewitt, William H. Werner, William G. Bond, J. P. Woods, M. L. Tisdale, E. T. Dunn.

Stoker Post has at this time a membership of about 270; has a suite of large and well-furnished rooms in the Adams building, corner of Main and Crawford streets, and is one of the most flourishing posts in the state.

Tax Laws in a Nut-Shell.

1. Every person of full age and sound mind shall list the personal property, money, credits or investments in joint stock companies, etc. of which he is the owner, agent or attorney, or otherwise controlled by him.

2. All merchants' and manufacturers' stocks and all property upon farms shall be listed in the township, city, village or school district in which the same is situated; and all other personal property, moneys, credits and investments shall be listed where the person resides at the time of the listment, if such person resides within the county where the same is listed, and if not, then in the township, city, village or school district where the property is when listed.

3. Each person required to list property shall list all property controlled by him in any manner on the day preceding the second Monday of April of that year.

4. In listing personal property it shall be listed at the usual selling price thereof, or at such price as it is believed could be obtained therefor in money at the time of listment and at the place where the same may then be; and moneys, credits, investments in bonds, stock companies or otherwise, at the true or current value in money.

5. Merchants and manufacturers shall list their stocks by obtaining a monthly average for the year or part of the year engaged in business.

6. All corporations and insurance companies make their returns direct to the county auditor, or proper state officers.

7. All listments of personal property, moneys, credits, investments in bonds, stock companies or otherwise, shall be made between the second Monday of April and the third Monday of May.

8. The assessor shall, in case of refusal or neglect on the part of any person to make his listment as prescribed by law, ascertain the amount of property and list the same.

9. When any person has been prevented from making his listment on account of sickness or absence, and the assessor shall have made a statement for him, he may at any time, before the same is placed on the duplicate, make and file with the auditor the proper statement, and if the statement is accompanied with an affidavit to the effect that such failure to list was due to sickness or absence, the auditor shall correct the same.

10. All new structures, additions or repairs, of more than $100 in value, made within the year of any assessment, shall be reported to the assessor, together with an accurate description of the real estate upon which the same is situated.

11. All buildings destroyed by fire, flood, tornado, or otherwise, within the assessment year, shall be reported to the assessor, so that the same may be taken from the duplicate.

12. Any personal property list for taxation, that has been destroyed by fire, flood or otherwise, after the second Monday of April and before the final adjournment of the board of equalization, by reporting the same to such board, shall be deducted from said return.

13. Any building destroyed by fire, flood, tornado, or otherwise, before the first day of October and after the second Monday in April in any year, shall be deducted from the tax duplicate by the auditor, if the same is reported upon the oath of owner and two disinterested freeholders of the township, city or village in which such building is situated, providing the same is reported within the time above mentioned.

14. "Every dog over three months of age shall be listed, either by the owner or by the assessor in the name of the owner, without affixing any valuation thereto; but the owner may affix any value thereto he wishes without swearing to the valuation. Every person who keeps or harbors a dog, or dogs, or who knowingly permits the keeping or harboring of a dog or dogs, upon his premises, shall, for the purposes of such listing and taxation, be deemed the owner thereof; and the assessor shall ascertain the owner or harbinger of every dog within his territory, and for this purpose may examine under oath any person he may think proper," and every person who refuses or neglects to list, or refuses or neglects to pay taxes, on such dog or dogs, shall be fined in any sum not exceeding five dollars.

15. The first nine items of personal property may be exhibited by the person making the statement and allow the assessor to fix the value, and in such case the oath only applies to the fact that all the property was fully exhibited.

16. No exemption is to be allowed to any person, firm or corporation, only from the first twelve items enumerated on the blank for listing personal property.

17. Every person listing personal property is entitled to $100 exemption from the first twelve items of his individual return.

18. Individual debts cannot be taken from partnership credits.

19. If any one of the heads or members of a family has credits separate and apart from any other member of the family, the same is not offset by debts of any other member of the family.

20. Any person refusing to swear to his tax return shall pay taxes on the amount returned, together with fifty per cent. penalty.

Tax attaches on the day preceding the second Monday of April of any year, and all property owned and held on said day is required by law to be listed.

Taxes are levied by the state of Ohio, through the legislature; by the county through the county commissioners and county auditor (the county auditor has power only in making levy for the infirmity fund on an estimate of the amount of money needed by the infirmity directors); by the township through the township trustees; by cities and incorporated villages through their councils; by school districts through their school boards.

For the benefit of some of our taxpayers who do not know upon whom the responsibility for increasing or decreasing taxes rests, I will explain as well as I am able in a few brief lines: If your property is taxable in some township outside of any corporation, special school district or city, your taxes are made up of state, county, township and school tax; if your property is in some special school district or corporation embodied within the boundaries of such district, your taxes are made up of state, county, township, corporation and school tax; if, however, your property is taxed in some corporation which is not set off into a special school district, your taxes are made up from the same source as above stated, except that the school tax is levied by the township board; and in the case of property located in cities, the same rule applies except in the case of Findlay, where there is no township organization; inside the city limits there are no township taxes.

It may be deemed proper to state the extent of the taxing power of each body that exercises their authority in these matters: The state levy extends over the entire state; the county levy over all taxable property within the limits of the county; the township levies over all taxable property in such township (except road tax, which does not extend over corporations included in any township); the school levy over all taxable property within said school district, and the corporation levy over all taxable property within the limits of such corporation.

Taxes are divided into two installments, December and June. The June tax is one-half of all taxes arising from levies, except road tax and the "blanket" sewer tax of Findlay. The December tax is one-half of all taxes arising from levies, including road tax, dog tax, and the "blanket" sewer tax of Findlay.

Taxes are all due in December of the year when the tax levies and assessments are made, but for leniency to the taxpayers, and as stated in the law, in case the December tax is paid at the proper time, the balance can be carried until June without any penalty.

In case of non-payment of taxes by December 20th on real estate, fifteen per cent. penalty is added to the amount delinquent, and penalty with delinquency is added to the June tax, to be collected not later than June 20th.

In case of non-payment of December and June tax on real estate by June 20th, a fifteen per cent. penalty is added to the June tax and the whole amount will be carried against such property as delinquent taxes, which, added to the December taxes of the next year, makes the December payment; and if not paid by December 20th, will be advertised to be offered at delinquent sale on the third Tuesday of the following January. This is the condition of affairs in case the June tax of any year remains unpaid, as well as the entire year.

All real estate against which there is charged a delinquency, as above stated, remaining unpaid on the third Tuesday of January, will be offered for sale, and if sold, the purchaser, on producing his receipt of payment of all taxes charged, is given a tax certificate, which entitles him to the ownership of said property so bid in, and the auditor transfers the property to the purchaser of the tax title. The purchaser, after two years in possession of such tax certificate, and receipts of all taxes paid after such sale, is entitled to an auditor's deed, which, when issued, gives him possession of the property.

In case such tract of land is offered and not sold, it is forfeited to the state of Ohio, and must remain as such until redeemed by the owner or purchaser, as hereinafter provided. All lands forfeited to the state of Ohio and not paid by the second Monday of December in each odd year, or in case of an omission of sale in December of each odd year, then the following April, will be offered again, and if sold, the purchaser receives a certificate of sale, which entitles him to an auditor's deed in six months.

If such property is not sold at forfeited sale, it is re-forfeited and still remains in the name of the state of Ohio, all the while accumulating fifteen per cent. penalty on each installment as it becomes delinquent.

After delinquent tax sale, penalty to tax title purchaser is fifteen per cent. first year, plus six per cent. interest, and after first year 25 per cent. penalty, and six per cent. interest. These penalties and interest are also figured on all payments made after purchase. After forfeited tax sale, penalty is fifty per cent. plus six per cent. interest, including all payments made after purchase.

On personal property there is no penalty for non-payment of December tax, and no penalty is charged against it until it is carried to the delinquent personal duplicate of the following year; then ten per cent. penalty is added; but, however, the treasurer may proceed to collect any installment of tax on personal property after it becomes due and charge therefor five per cent., or he may levy upon and attach the property so listed.

In asking for tax, remember property stands on treasurer's books in name of owner on the day preceding the second Monday of April of the tax year; also remember the name on the tax duplicate remains unchanged throughout the entire year.

In calling in person or sending for your tax, if it is convenient, produce the receipt of the preceding payment, as it often assists in locating property.

TWENTY-FIRST OHIO VOLUNTEER INFANTRY—THREE MONTHS' SERVICE.

The companies composing this organization were enrolled as follows: Companies A, F and G, April 19, 20 and 26, 1861, respectively, at Findlay; B, April 23, 1861, at Gilead; C, April 25, 1861, at Perrysburg; D, April 20, 1861, at Ottawa; E, April 20, 1861, at Kalida; H, April 23, 1861, at Fostoria; I, April 26, 1861, at Elmore, and K, April 24, 1861, at Defiance. They at once proceeded to Camp Taylor, Cleveland, Ohio, where the regimental organization was formed, and active preparation made for the field. When the quota under the first call had been filled, it was found by the state officials that nine full regiments were in camp and had to be cared for, the Twenty-first being one of them. Ohio being a border state, and liable to invasion, these additional troops were mustered into state service, in accordance with an act of the general assembly to provide more effectually for the defense of the state against invasion, passed April 26, 1861, the eighth section of which provided as follows:

"That the governor is hereby authorized, in case any further requisition shall be made by the president of the United States upon this state for troops, to cause the volunteer militia authorized by the act, or any portion of the same, to be mustered into the service of the United States, in pursuance of such act."

This regiment was mustered into the state service as follows: Company A, May 20, 1861; Companies B, D, E, F, G, H and I, May 21, 1861, and Companies C and K, May 22, 1861, at Camp Taylor, Cleveland, Ohio, by H. M. Neil, aid-de-camp to the governor of Ohio, to date from April 27, 1861.

On May 23, 1861, it moved to Gallipolis, stopping at Columbus for arms and accoutrements. It remained in camp until July 3, 1861, when it was ordered to Ravenswood, Va., by General McClellan, to re-enforce other troops, there expecting an attack from O. Jennings Wise, whose forces were at Ripley. It made a forced march to Ripley, surprised and drove the rebels away, and then returned to Gallipolis by steamer. On July 11, 1861, it became part of General Cox's brigade, and marched to Red House, on the Kanawha river, where it was ordered to make a reconnoissance, for the purpose of discovering the rebel position. It performed gallant duty at Scarytown, W. Va., where Colonel Morton led the forces in a successful bayonet charge, he receiving a painful wound through the hips. The enemy were re-enforced and advanced their column, capturing Colonel Morton and Lieutenant Brown, of the Twelfth O. V. I., who remained with the colonel and the other wounded. Its loss in this battle was two brave men killed, two mortally wounded, and a number slightly wounded.

It remained in the field under Lieutenant Colonel Niebling until ordered home to be mustered out of service, which occurred August 12, 1861, at Columbus, Ohio, by T. J. Cram, Major Topographical Engineers, mustering officer.

Its casualties during its term of service were four men killed in battle, three drowned, and eight died of disease.

Under the president's call for 300,000 troops, the state promptly transferred it into the United States service, but before the general government could pay it, covering its period of service from date of acceptance by the governor of Ohio, it became necessary for congress to enact the following legislation for the relief of Ohio volunteers:

"WHEREAS, The war department has decided that the term of service of the ninety days' volunteers called out under the act of seventeen hundred and ninety-five, commenced only on the day that they were actually sworn into the service of the United States: and

"WHEREAS, The troops now in the service of the United States from the state of Ohio were not sworn into said service until some days after their organization and acceptance as companies by the governor of said state, and that for such period under existing laws no payment can be made: Therefore

"Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the proper disbursing officer compute and pay to the said volunteers compensation from the day of their organization and acceptance as companies by the governor of the state of Ohio, as aforesaid, until the expiration of their term of service."

"Approved July 24, 1861."

The following battle in which this regiment bore an honorable part has been compiled during the preparation of this work, reference having been made with the official army register:

FIRST, SECOND AND THIRD INDEPENDENT COMPANIES, OHIO VOLUNTEER SHARPSHOOTERS (OR COS. G, H AND K, 66TH ILL. V. I.)—THREE YEARS' SERVICE.

In the fall of 1861 the recruiting of ten companies of sharpshooters was ordered by the government for General John C. Fremont, then in command of the Department of the Missouri. The regiment was to be known as Birge's Sharpshooters. Governor Tod received instructions from the war department that recruits for this service should undergo a rigid test before acceptance which caused so much delay that the project failed. The regiment, however, was formed by a combination of troops from several states, Ohio furnishing but three companies for this regiment. The remaining seven companies were formed later. A battalion of four companies entered the Army of the Cumberland, one company was attached to the 79th O. V. I. and two companies to the 60th O. V. I. (3 years' service.) The second independent company was recruited in Hancock and Hardin counties, the organization being formed at Findlay during the months of September and October, 1861, by Captain Campbell Daugherty. It was also ordered to St. Louis, where it arrived a short time after Captain Reeds' company, and was mustered into service of the United States November 30, 1861, by Lieutenant J. C. Bundy, 15th Ill. V. C., mustering officer, and was assigned as Co. H, Birge's Western Sharpshooters. On December 12, 1861, the regiment left Camp Benton, and was engaged in scouting duty through the counties of Boone, Andrian and Macon, Missouri, in pursuit of the rebel force, who were endeavoring to destroy the North Missouri railroad. It participated in the battle of Mount Zion, Missouri, December 28, 1861. On February 4, 1862, it left Camp McClellen, Sturgeon, Missouri, for Fort Henry, Tennessee, engaging with the enemy at Fort Donelson, February 12 to 16, capturing three stands of colors from the Third, Sixteenth and Eighteenth regiments, Tennessee Volunteer Infantry, C. S. A., also before Shiloh April 6 and 7, 1862.

The Third Independent Company was recruited in the counties of Allen and Hardin. It was enrolled at Lima, Allen county, Ohio, from March 12 to April 4, 1862, by Captain George A. Taylor, and was mustered into service of the United States April 7, 1862, at Camp Chase, Columbus, Ohio, by Albert B. Dod, Captain Fifteen Infantry U. S. A., mustering officer. The company was at once ordered to the front, and on April 14 joined Birge's Western Sharpshooters at Camp C. F. Smith, Pittsburg Landing. On this date the designation of the regiment was changed to the Western Sharpshooters, Fourteenth Regiment Infantry. Previous to this time, the regiment not having a state designation, Missouri and Illinois both claimed it. However, by order of the war department and consent of acting adjutant general of Missouri the regiment was considered as belonging to Illinois.

The regiment's final designation was Sixty-sixth regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry. The three Ohio companies took the regimental letters G, H and K, but also retained the figures as independent companies until their re-enlistment as veterans, when they were known afterwards by letter only. They established Camp Davies, Mississippi, as an outpost for General U. S. Grant's army; served General

E.O.C. Ord as headquarters guard from June 23 to August 23, 1862; accompanied General G. M. Dodge, Second Division, Sixteenth Army Corps from Camp Davies to Pulaski, Tennessee, to re-enforce General Thomas, Army of the Cumberland at Chattanooga, Tennessee, guarded the Nashville & Decatur railroad and Rhode's Bridge, Tennessee; entered the service as veterans December 22, 1863, at Camp P. E. Burke, Pulaski, Tennessee; received veteran furlough January 28, 1864, the Ohio companies going to Chicago with their regiments, and thence to their home in Ohio.

Returning in time for the Atlanta campaign, they became a part of the left wing Sixteenth Army Corps, McPherson's army, and in this position passed through the actions of this famous march. They subsequently participated in the march to the sea, and in the campaigns of the Carolinas. The three Ohio companies, blended as heroes, shared equally with great distinction and fortitude the trials, hardships, privations and dangers of war.

The First and Second Companies were mustered out of service July 7, 1865, at Louisville, Kentucky, after serving nearly four years. The Third company was mustered out on expiration of term of service April 26, 1865, at Springfield, Illinois.

Inscribed on the Roll of Honor of three companies are the names of fifty-nine heroes, killed or died of disease, whose sacrifices, heroism, sufferings and deaths during their brilliant service will never cease to be cherished by a grateful people.

SEVENTH INDEPENDENT COMPANY OHIO VOLUNTEER SHARPSHOOTERS—THREE YEARS' SERVICE.

This company known as Sherman's body-guard, was organized in the fall of 1862, and mustered into the United States service January 27, 1863, at Camp Cleveland, Ohio, by C. O. Howard, Captain Eighteenth Infantry, U. S. A., mustering officer. They were on duty as sharpshooters, first under General Rosecrans from the 10th of March until his supersedure, and then under General Thomas. On the 20th of May, the company was ordered to General Sherman's headquarters, where it remained near the person of the commanding general until the close of the war with inconsiderable loss, save on a foraging expedition near Marietta, Ga., in which eight men were captured by guerillas and remained in rebel prisons until the close of the war. It was with General Sherman through the march to the sea, the campaign of the Carolinas and the grand review, and accompanied him to St. Louis, Mo., where it continued to serve for a short time as headquarters guard. On its departure for Ohio for muster-out General Sherman issued the following:

“Headquarters Military Division of Mississippi,
St. Louis, Mo., July 17, 1865.

The general commanding tenders to the officers and men of the Seventh Independent Company of the Ohio Sharpshooters his personal thanks for their long and valuable service near his person in the eventful campaign beginning at Chattanooga, Tenn., and ending with the war. He commends them as a fine body of intelligent young volunteers to whom he attributes his personal safety in the battles, marches and bivouacs in Georgia and the Carolinas. He wishes them long life and a proud consciousness of having done their duty with a cheerfulness, precision and intelligence worthy the great cause in which they were engaged, and he bespeaks for them a kind and generous welcome back to their old homes in Ohio.” It was ordered home to be mustered out of service, which occurred July 28, 1865, at Camp Chase, Ohio, by Charles Sprawl, Aid-de Camp to governor of Ohio, mustering officer. The roll of honor shows that it lost eighteen men during its term of service, seventeen of whom died of disease and one killed in action at Rossville, Ga. It took an honorable part in the following battles:

Stone River, Tenn.....	December 31, 1862, to January 2, 1863

EIGHTH INDEPENDENT COMPANY OHIO VOLUNTEER SHARPSHOOTERS.
THREE YEARS' SERVICE.

The recruits composing this organization were enrolled by Captain Barton, October 9, 1862, at Camp Portsmouth, Ohio. On January 7, 1863, the company was ordered by Governor Tod to Camp Dennison, where it arrived two days later. On June 16, 1863, it was ordered to the command of Colonel Wallace to suppress an insurrection of Butternuts in Holmes county, returning June 23, 1863. On July 12, 1863, it was ordered to Cincinnati, and participated with other troops in repelling Morgan's raid. It performed picket duty west of the city until July 17, and then returned to the city and performed guard duty. It was mustered into the United States service March 9, and August 22, 1863, at Camp Dennison, Ohio, by Joseph R. Paxton, Captain 15th Infantry, U. S. A., and P. W. Stanhope, Captain 12th Infantry, U. S. A., mustering officers. November 10, 1863, it was ordered by Major General Grant to proceed to Chattanooga, Tennessee, at which place it arrived November 25, 1863, and was attached to a temporary organization composed of the Fifth, Sixth and Seventh companies of Ohio Sharpshooters, under command of Captain Gershen M. Barber, of the Fifth Independent company. It performed duties as headquarters guard to Major General Thomas. It was mustered out of service July 19, 1865, at Nashville, Tennessee, by William S. Wilson, captain 71st O. V. I., mustering officer. The company's loss during its term of service was three men died of disease, and one drowned in Cumberland river.

TENTH INDEPENDENT COMPANY OHIO VOLUNTEER SHARPSHOOTERS.
THREE YEARS' SERVICE.

This independent company was organized at Cleveland, Ohio, in the month of March, 1864. The Tenth company was mustered into the United States service April 1, 1864, at Cleveland, Ohio, by M. Douglas, Captain 18th Infantry, U. S. A., mustering officer. It rendezvoused at Camp Taylor, Cleveland, Ohio, and was temporarily attached to the 60th O. V. I. (three years). A regiment then composed of six companies. It left Camp Taylor for the field, arrived at Alexandria, Va., April 24, 1864. It reported to General Burnside, then in command of the Ninth Army Corps, and was assigned to the second brigade, third division. It is sufficient to say that it took an honorable part in the engagements at the North Anna. Tolopotomy, Bethesda church, Cold Harbor, siege of Petersburg, and the actions about Richmond.

This company was permanently transferred to the 6th O. V. I., February 24, 1865, by special orders from the war department.

It was mustered out of the United States service July 28, 1865, at Washington, D. C., by Sylvester Keyser, Captain Second Michigan Veteran Volunteers, mustering officer. The roll of honor of this company contains the names of thirty-two men who lost their lives while in the service of the government, nine were killed in battle, while twenty-three died from wounds received or from disease. The official list of battles has not yet been published by the war department, but the following list has been compiled after careful examination:

FIFTY-FOURTH REGIMENT OHIO VOLUNTEER INFANTRY.

THREE YEARS' SERVICE.

This regiment was organized at Camp Dennison, Ohio, October, 1861, to serve three years. The original members (except veterans) were mustered out by detachments in November, 1864, and the organization, composed of veterans and recruits, retained in service until August 15, 1865, when it was mustered out in accordance with orders from the war department.

The records of this regiment, on file in the adjutant general's office, are so incomplete, and the difficulty of obtaining the same from the war department so great, that it has been impossible to make a perfect roster. A number of names will probably appear in companies in which they do not belong, as there are many confusions as to the company in which certain men should appear.

Only a partial official list of battles, in which this regiment bore an honorable part has yet been published by the war department, but the following list has been compiled, after careful research, during the preparation of this work:

102ND REGIMENT OHIO VOLUNTEER INFANTRY.

THREE YEARS' SERVICE.

This regiment was organized at Mansfield, Ohio, August and September, 1862, to serve three years. It moved by rail to Covington, Ky., September 4, 1862, and was engaged in the defense of that city against General Kirby Smith. After about two weeks of duty it was sent to Louisville, Ky., and participated in the defense of that city against General Bragg, and joined in the pursuit of his army, October 5, 1862. The regiment started for Nashville September 21, 1863, where it remained about six months. On the 26th of April, 1864, the regiment was transferred to Tullahoma, Tennessee, where it guarded the railroad from Normandy to Decherd, until the 6th of June. The regiment then moved across the Cumberland Mountains to Bellefonte, Ala., arriving on the 10th of June, continuing its march to Dodsonville, where it was employed on the defense of the line of the Tennessee river from Stevenson to the foot of Seven Mile Island, a distance of fifty miles. During the summer the regiment had frequent engagements with the enemy. On the 23d of September, about four hundred men of the regiment were ordered to re-enforce the fort at Athens, Ala., and on the 24th lost a large number of men killed and wounded, the remainder being captured and sent to Cahaba Prison. After being paroled the prisoners were placed on board the ill-fated steamer Sultana, and, as near as can be ascertained, seventy perished in that disaster. The regiment was engaged at the siege of Decatur, Ala., October 26, 27, 28 and 29, 1864. After the siege it was frequently engaged in sharp and severe skirmishes with the enemy. It was mustered out June 30, 1865, at Nashville, Tenn., in accordance with orders from the war department.

115TH REGIMENT OHIO VOLUNTEER INFANTRY.

THREE YEARS' SERVICE.

This regiment was organized in the counties of Portage, Stark and Columbia, in August and September, 1862, to serve three years. It was ordered to Cincinnati, Ohio, and on the 9th of October was divided—five companies left at Cincinnati, where they acted as provost guard, and five companies sent to Columbus, Ohio to perform guard duty.

In October, 1862, the battalion sent to Columbus was ordered to Maysville, Ky., and in December to Covington, where it performed provost duty until October, 1863. It was then ordered to report at Chattanooga, Tenn., and from there sent to Murfreesboro, where a part of the regiment was mounted and sent out against rebel guerrillas. In June, 1864, that part of the regiment not mounted was stationed on the line of the Nashville and Chattanooga railroad, in block-houses, to prevent the rebels from destroying it. While engaged in this service the regiment had an engagement with Wheeler's forces at Lavergne, Tenn., August 31 and September 1, 1864. In the early part of December, 1864, nearly two hundred members of those who were stationed in block-houses, were captured, and after being paroled were placed on the ill-fated steamer Sultana which exploded on the Mississippi river, near Memphis, Tenn., April 27, 1865. The regiment was engaged in the battle of the Cedars, near Murfreesboro, Tenn., December 5, 6, and 7, 1864. The detachment stationed at Cincinnati in 1862-63, was engaged in guarding prisoners and forwarding convalescent soldiers to their respective regiments. In July, 1863, it was called out for five or six days in pursuit of General Morgan, then on his raid through Ohio. In October it was sent to the front, and was assigned to the Fourth Division, Twentieth Army Corps. The regiment was mustered out of service June 22, 1865, in accordance with orders from the war department.

128TH REGIMENT OHIO VOLUNTEER INFANTRY.

This regiment was organized at Columbus, Johnson's Island, and Camp Cleveland, Ohio, from December 7, 1861, to January 8, 1864, to serve three years. Companies A, B, C and D, were originally known as Hoffman's Battalion, and were transferred to this regiment January 5, 1864. The One Hundred and Twenty-Eighth was principally engaged in guarding rebel prisoners at Johnson's Island, Ohio, but had frequently furnished detachments for service elsewhere, including a short but active campaign in pursuit of rebel troops in West Virginia in 1862. The original members of companies A and B were mustered out January 20 and February 28, 1865, by reason of expiration of term of service. The regiment was mustered out July 13, 1865, in accordance with orders from the war department.

129TH REGIMENT OHIO VOLUNTEER INFANTRY.
SIX MONTHS' SERVICE.

This regiment was organized at Cleveland, Ohio, August 10, 1863, to serve six months, and on the same day started for Camp Nelson, Ky. On the 20th of August the regiment left Camp Nelson for Cumberland Gap, at which place it assisted in the capture of the rebel garrison and more than two thousand rebel prisoners, with a large amount of war materials of all kinds. The regiment remained at and about the Gap, engaged in foraging, scouting, picket duty, etc., until the 1st of December, when it was ordered to move in the direction of Clinch river, which was reached the next day, at a point where the Knoxville road crosses that stream. At this point a sharp engagement was in progress in which the regiment took an active part. From the second to the last of December, the regiment had occasional skirmishes with the enemy. It was mustered out from March 4 to 10, 1864.

ONE HUNDRED DAYS' SERVICE.

This regiment was organized at Camp Chase, Ohio, May 6, 1864, to serve one hundred days. It was composed of two companies of the Fifty-eighth Battalion Ohio National Guard, from Hancock county, and two companies of the Seventy-sixth Battalion Ohio National Guard, from Franklin county, with the Third Ohio National Guard, from Franklin county. After muster-in the regiment was immediately ordered to Parkersburg, W. Va., where it arrived on the 8th day of May, and from this place it was ordered to New Creek, from which place it proceeded to Washington city, June 7, and was ordered to Bermuda Hundred, where it arrived on June 12. On the 16th of June the First Division of the First Brigade, to which this regiment was assigned, was ordered to destroy the Richmond and Petersburg railroad. The One Hundred and Thirty-third was assigned to the support of a battery, which opened a cannonade on the enemy, and, with other troops, succeeded in holding the rebels in check for five hours. On the 17th of July the regiment embarked at Point of Rocks and proceeded to Fort Powhattan. Here it was employed at work on the fortification and in repairing telegraph lines. On the 10th of August the regiment proceeded to Washington city, thence to Camp Chase, Ohio, where it was mustered out August 20, 1864, on expiration of term of service.

ONE HUNDRED THIRTY-FOURTH REGIMENT, OHIO VOLUNTEER INFANTRY.

ONE HUNDRED DAYS' SERVICE.

This regiment was organized at Camp Chase, Ohio, May 6, 1864, to serve one hundred days. It was composed of two companies of the Ninety-fourth Battalion, Ohio National Guard, from Shelby county, and one company of the Fifty-eighth Battalion, Ohio National Guard, from Hancock county, with the Fourth Regiment, Ohio National Guard, from Shelby county. On the seventh of May the regiment was ordered to Cumberland, Md., via Parkersburg, W. Va. It remained at Cumberland until the sixth of June, when it moved to Washington City and proceeded to White House. The regiment did not disembark, but proceeded immediately to City Point. Here it aided in pontooning the river and in building roads, and on the seventeenth of June was engaged in a skirmish with the enemy near Port Walthall. For seventy days the regiment formed a portion of the advanced lines operating on Richmond, and was engaged in entrenching and picket duty. It was mustered out August 31, 1864, on expiration of term of service.

149TH REGIMENT OHIO VOLUNTEER INFANTRY.

ONE HUNDRED DAYS' SERVICE.

This regiment was organized at Camp Dennison, Ohio, from the 8th to the 11th of May, 1864, to serve one hundred days. It was composed of the Twenty-Seventh Regiment Ohio National Guard, from Ross county, and the Fifty-Fifth Battalion Ohio National Guard, from Clinton county. On the 11th of May the regiment left the state for Baltimore, Md. Upon arriving it was assigned to duty at various forts in and around the city, and remained there until the 29th of May, when it was ordered to the eastern shore of Maryland, and distributed at different points. About the 4th of July the regiment was ordered to Monocacy Junction, and on the 9th took part in an engagement with the enemy.

The regiment lost in killed and wounded about thirty, and in prisoners over one hundred. After the battle of Monocacy it took part with the sixth and nineteenth corps in the marches in Maryland and Virginia. Portions of the regiment were with the One Hundred and Forty-Fourth when it was attacked by Mosby's guerillas, at Berryville, Va., August 13. The regiment returned to Ohio August 20, 1864, and was mustered out on the 30th, on expiration of its term of service.

151ST REGIMENT OHIO VOLUNTEER INFANTRY.
ONE HUNDRED DAYS' SERVICE.

This regiment was organized at Camp Chase, Ohio, May 13, 1864, to serve one hundred days. It was composed of the Thirty-Third Regiment Ohio National Guard, from Allen county, and the Fifty-Seventh Battalion Ohio National Guard, from Hocking county. On the 14th of May the regiment left Camp Chase for Washington city, via Ohio Central and Baltimore railroads. It reached Washington on the 21st of May, and reported to General Augur. The regiment was first stationed at Forts Sumner, Mansfield and Simmons. During the active operations of the rebels against Washington, on the 11th and 12th of July, the larger part of the regiment was under fire. Several of the companies were in the forts which were engaged in the battle. Companies C and G were at Fort Stevens. company I at Battery Smeade and company K at Fort Kearney. On the 17th of August orders were received to concentrate the regiment at Fort Simmons. From this place the regiment moved, via Baltimore and Pittsburg, to Camp Chase, where it arrived on the 23rd. It was mustered out August 27, 1864, on expiration of its term of service.

ONE HUNDRED DAYS' SERVICE.

This regiment was organized at Camp Chase, Ohio, May 9, 1864, to serve one hundred days. It was composed of the Seventieth Battalion, Ohio National Guard, from Tuscarawas county; Forty-Third Battalion, Ohio National Guard, from Noble county; and one company of the Fifty-Eighth Battalion, Ohio National Guard, from Hancock county. The regiment was immediately ordered to Cumberland, Md., where it arrived at noon on the 12th. On the 28th the regiment moved to Martinsburg, W. Va., and on the 4th of June companies A, B, D, F, and H, with other troops were sent up the Shenandoah Valley with a supply-train for Hunter's army, then supposed to be near Staunton. On reaching that place it was found that General Hunter had advanced but they finally overtook him at Lexington, on the 11th. They remained with the regiment until it arrived at Lynchburg, when having turned over the supplies, they were ordered back to Martinsburg. After considerable marching and guard duty the regiment fell back to Maryland Heights. Early on the morning of the 6th of July, skirmishing commenced and continued for two days, the One Hundred and Sixty-First taking an active part. On the 25th of August it was ordered to Ohio, and mustered out September 2, 1864, on expiration of its term of service.

176TH REGIMENT OHIO VOLUNTEER INFANTRY.

ONE YEAR'S SERVICE.

This regiment was organized at Columbus, Sandusky, Wooster, Alliance, Camp Chase, and Circleville, Ohio, from August 10 to September 21, 1864, to serve one year. As soon as the organization was completed the regiment was ordered to Nashville, Tenn., and assigned to the Second Brigade, Fourth Division, Twentieth Army Corps. Soon after its arrival it was detailed to perform provost-guard duty at Nashville, and during the battle of Nashville it was in the works; but, with the exception of a few companies under Major Cummings, the regiment was not engaged. It was mustered out June 14, 1865, in accordance with orders from the war department.

ONE YEAR'S SERVICE.

This regiment was organized at Camp Chase, Ohio, September 26, 1864, to serve one year, and was at once dispatched, by rail and river, to Nashville, with orders to report to Major General George H. Thomas for duty. The regiment remained in Nashville some two weeks, performing guard duty when it was sent to Tullahoma, Tenn., where it composed part of the post command. The post at Tullahoma was evacuated in the winter of 1864, and the One Hundred and Seventy-Eighth was sent to Murfreesboro, where it remained during the siege. After the defeat of General Hood's army, at Nashville, the One Hundred and Seventy-Eighth was ordered to North Carolina. It landed at Morehead city, N. C., with the Twenty-Third Army Corps, and a few days thereafter participated in a skirmish with the enemy at Wise's Fork. After the surrender of Johnston's army, the regiment was ordered to Charlotte, N. C., where it performed garrison duty, until mustered out of service June 29, 1865, in accordance with orders from the war department.

180TH REGIMENT OHIO VOLUNTEER INFANTRY.

ONE YEAR'S SERVICE.

This regiment was organized at Camp Chase, Ohio, in September and October, 1864, to serve one year. It left Camp Chase on the 15th of October for Nashville, Tenn., and from Nashville was ordered to Dechard, Tenn. The regiment remained at Dechard for the most part of three months, and was used as guard to the Nashville and Chattanooga railroad. On January 6, 1865, the regiment was ordered to Nashville, and, after remaining there a few days, was ordered to guard a train of wagons bound for Eastport, Miss. It went as far as Columbus, where it was met by an order to return to Nashville, and from there was ordered to Washington city. The regiment reached Washington city January 31, 1865, and was placed in Camp Stoneman, near that city. After remaining about three weeks in camp it was ordered to Fort Fisher. On reaching the mouth of Cape Fear river, the fall of Fort Fisher was announced, rendering its service unnecessary. The regiment was then taken to Newbern, where it joined a force under General J. D. Cox, to open railway communication with Goldsboro and General Sherman's army. At Rinston, N. C., on the 8th, 9th and 10th of March, the regiment had an engagement with the force under Generals Bragg and Hoke, in which the regiment lost a number killed and wounded. From Kingston the regiment marched to Goldsboro, which place it reached March 21st. It remained here until April 9th, and then marched with Sherman's army to Raleigh, N. C., where it performed garrison duty until the surrender of Johnston's army. The regiment then moved to Greensboro, and from there to Charlotte, where it remained as the city garrison until July 12, 1865, when it was mustered out in accordance with orders from the war department.

This regiment was organized at Camp Chase, Ohio, March 9, 1865, to serve one year. The regiment started for the field March 12, arriving at Halltown, Va., near Harper's Ferry, March 16, and reported to General John R. Brooks, commanding Provisional Division. On the 31st of March the division broke camp and marched through Charlestown, encamping about one mile beyond. On the 3rd of April the One Hundred and Ninety-Second moved at daylight, under orders to relieve a regiment picketing the Shenandoah river for three or four miles above and below Kabeltown, and about ten miles from the camp of the division. April 4, under orders for concentration of troops at Winchester for movement upon Lynchburg, the line on the river was abandoned, and the troops moved to Winchester via Berryville. The One Hundred and Ninety-Second was stationed some time near Stevenson's Station, and afterwards near Jordan Springs. It was then ordered to Reed's Hill, forty-six miles above Winchester, May 23d, at which place the regiment encamped until ordered to be mustered out, except two companies, which were stationed at Harrisburg, twenty-five miles above. The regiment was mustered out September 1, 1865, in accordance with orders from the war department.

FIRST REGIMENT OHIO VOLUNTEER HEAVY ARTILLERY.

THREE YEARS' SERVICE.

This regiment was mustered into the service as the One Hundredth and Seventeenth regiment, O. V. I., in September, 1862, at Camp Portsmouth, Ohio, its eight companies aggregating 796 men. In October, 1862, the regiment was ordered to Kentucky, where, for the succeeding seven months, it was engaged in guard duty and expeditions against guerrillas. In May, 1863, orders were issued by the war department changing the organization into the First Regiment Heavy Artillery, Ohio Volunteers, and on August 12, 1863, it was so reorganized, with twelve full companies, aggregating 1,839 officers and men. During the process of reorganization the regiment constructed the extensive fortifications around Covington and Newport. During the fall and winter of 1863-64, the regiment, in battalion detachments, was engaged in guard duty at various points in Kentucky. On February 19, 1864, it started under orders, through heavy snow and extreme cold, over the mountains to Knoxville, Tenn., arriving there March 9. Until September the regiment was engaged in guarding the railroads through Tennessee, and subsequently participated in Burbridge and Stoneman's raids against Saltville. During the winter of 1864-65 it was constantly engaged in foraging and fighting guerrillas throughout East Tennessee and North Carolina. Forming a part of the First Brigade, Fourth Division, Army of the Cumberland, the regiment was engaged in guarding mountain passes and garrisoning captured points in Virginia and North Carolina. After the surrender of Lee and Johnston the regiment saw service in North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia and Tennessee. On July 25, 1865, it was mustered out of the service, at Knoxville, Tenn., in accordance with orders from the war department.

SECOND REGIMENT, OHIO VOLUNTEER HEAVY ARTILLERY.

THREE YEARS' SERVICE.

This regiment was organized at Camp Dennison, Ohio, from June to September, 1863, to serve three years. It was mustered out of service August 23, 1865, in accordance with orders from the war department.

The official list of battles, in which this regiment bore an honorable part, is not yet published by the war department, but a brief statement of the movements and operations of the regiment will be found at the head of each company. The companies, during the greater part of their service, were separated from each other, and for this reason it was thought best to give the history of each company separately.

COMPANY L, SECOND HEAVY ARTILLERY.

Mustered in September 7, 1863, at Covington, Ky., by P. W. Stanhope, captain Twelfth Infantry, and J. L. Proctor, captain Eighteenth Infantry, U. S. A. On the eighth of October the company moved to Fort Boone, Frankfort, Ky. It was transferred, in December of the same year, to Battery Simons, Munfordsville, Ky. From there, in May, 1864, it marched to Camp Sedgwick, at Cleveland, Tenn., as guard to the regimental wagon-train. On August 3, 1864, it moved to Charleston, Tenn., where it participated in the engagement with the rebel cavalry, and in the subsequent movements, until it reached Strawberry Plains, where it remained until August, 1865. Mustered out August 23, 1865, at Nashville, Tenn., by J. W. Chickering, captain Eighty-eighth Illinois Infantry.

FIRST OHIO VOLUNTEER CAVALRY.

THREE YEARS' SERVICE.

This regiment was organized at Camp Chase, Ohio, from August 17th to October 5th, 1861, to serve three years. On the expiration of their terms of service, the original members (except veterans), were mustered out, and the organization, composed of veterans and recruits, continued in service until it was mustered out by companies, as follows: A to K, inclusive, and M, September 13, 1865, at Hilton Head, S. C., and Company L, September 26, 1865, at Nashville, Tenn., in accordance with orders from the war department. Companies A and C were ordered to West Virginia in September, 1861, and were attached to the commands of Generals Shields and Banks, in the Shenandoah Valley; and with the Army of Virginia under General Pope and the Army of the Potomac, and as headquarters guard of the cavalry divisions of Generals Gregg and Kilpatrick. They bore an honorable part in the campaigns and engagements in Virginia, Maryland and Pennsylvania, until the spring of 1864, when they were ordered to join the regiment.

The official list of battles in which this regiment was engaged is not yet published by the war department, but the following list has been compiled after careful research during the compilation of this work. It does not include numerous battles and skirmishes in which single companies and small detachments of the regiment were engaged:

SIXTH OHIO VOLUNTEER CAVALRY.

THREE YEARS' SERVICE.

This regiment was organized by Colonel William R. Lloyd, at Camp Hutchins, Warren, Ohio, in October, November and December, 1861, to serve three years. On the expiration of its term of service, the original members (except veterans), were mustered out, and the organization retained in service until August 7, 1865, when it was mustered out at Petersburg, Va., in accordance with orders from the war department. The roster of this regiment shows that from 1861 to 1865 there were seventeen hundred and fifty-eight (1,758) officers and enlisted men in the organization. This does not include one battalion of four companies which was detached and taken to the far west in command of Lieutenant Colonel William O. Collins. Under an order from the war department, dated September 20, 1862, there were four companies recruited to fill up the regiment. These companies were in part recruited at Camp Cleveland, Ohio, and two of them, B and E, joined the regiment at Falmouth, Va., March 9, 1863. The other two, F and M, joined the regiment March 8, 1864, at Warrenton, Va. The Sixth Regiment entered the United States service in the field in Western Virginia, in May, 1862, under General Fremont; thence into the Valley of Virginia, under General Sigel; thence into the campaign in front of Washington, D. C., in the summer of 1862, with the Army of Virginia, under General John Pope; with General George B. McClellan, in the Army of the Potomac, in the fall of 1862; with General Burnside in the winter of 1862 and 1863; and in the winter and spring of 1863, with General Joe Hooker, who organized the cavalry corps early in 1863, thereafter commanded in succession by Generals Stoneman, Pleasanton and Sheridan; then, in the summer of 1863, under General Meade, and then, until the close of the war, under Generals Meade, Grant and Sheridan.

The regiment, from date of organization of the "Cavalry Corps. Army of the Potomac," served in the brigades commanded by Generals Buford, Duffie, Averill, McIntosh, D. McM. Gregg, Kilpatrick, Huey, Davies, and C. H. Smith; and in divisions commanded by Generals Bayard, Averill, Pleasanton, Gregg and Crook.

Following is a list of battles, engagements and skirmishes in which this regiment bore an honorable part:

Relics from "Indian Green."

An Indian town was once located on the banks of the Blanchard river, at what is known as Indian Green, six miles west of Findlay.

The place is owned, at present, by R. B. Worden.

When the country was first settled, the remains of their rude houses could still be seen, and as late as 1845 the village was well defined. Judge Jacob F. Burket, then a young boy, frequently had the grave of "The Old Chief" pointed out to him from the roadside. In 1901, two men were grading the road at this place, and unexpectedly plowed up a copper bucket and a number of interesting relics, along with the skeleton of the old chief. The bucket held one quart, and had a tight copper lid on, with an iron bail, and is what is known in the north as a "Hudson Bay bucket." Such buckets were then, and are now, a regular article of trade between the Hudson Bay Fur Company and the Indians.

In the bucket were two small wooden dishes, made of boxwood. One had a handle like a butter ladle, and the other was round, like a small, deep saucer. They were perfectly dry and well preserved, and had evidently been obtained in some raid, as they were hand made. A large number of silver ornaments were found, including a round silver breast plate, six inches in diameter, finely engraved, with a row of inverted hearts cut through and running clear around the ornament; also a medallion, which had two lockets fastened to it by ribbons, with an engraved turkey on the under side. The lockets were oblong in shape, and about an inch long by two-thirds of an inch wide. Each locket opened on both sides. The medallion was about two and one-half inches in diameter.

A pewter dish about eight inches in diameter, together with some brass buttons, a number of thin silver rings which evidently had been sewed on his clothes as ornaments, a brass cup which was evidently used to melt lead in (it had been hammered out and was about two inches in diameter and one-half inch deep), a gun flint, two flint arrowheads and three large metal belt buckles, were also found.

A fine pipe tomahawk was by his side. It was made of splendid steel and was evidently highly finished, as it still shows evidences of a high order of workmanship. Along with it were found three knives, one of them shaped like the traditional scalping-knife; a lot of beads, two silver bracelets, two inches wide, finely ribbed and engraved; two silver ear-rings, and a small pair of scissors. Remnants of some gaily colored cloth were also found. The silverware was all stamped "P. C., Montreal."

It has sometimes been thought that this might be the unknown grave of Chief Turkey Foot, who was killed at the battle of Fallen Timbers, in 1794. The evidence is circumstantial and only guess work, but it is plausible.

First.—The Blanchard river is a fork of the Maumee, on whose banks Turkey Foot was killed, near Maumee. The Indians always removed their dead to their homes when possible, and as Turkey Foot's body was not left on the battlefield, what would have been easier than for them to bring his body in a canoe to the place of burial, and no more beautiful spot could have been found than Indian Green.

Second.—The relics found show that a chief of importance was buried there.

Third.—The condition of the cloth, ribbons, wooden dishes and the multitude of other things show that they had not been buried a great while before the country was settled.

Fourth.—The engraved turkey is at least a strong circumstance, when taken in connection with the other facts.

All of the articles are now owned by H. F. Burket, of Findlay, the well known attorney, who obtained them from Mr. John Collingwood, who plowed them up. Mr. Burket has also the largest collection of Indian stone implements in the county.
